New Rolling Stone Poll

 by st louis blues » Sat Jun 23, 2012 5:48 am

Thought some of you might be interested in this. I found this online tonight, but earlier I was reading RS and this fall it seems they are going to have some sort of "Women Who Rock" special. They mentioned Tina, Janis, Taylor Swift, but I would be shocked if they actually said anything in great length about Dusty. Anyway, here is the poll results on albums by females. What do you think?

Aretha Franklin, Joni Mitchell, Adele among Rolling Stone's top women artist's albums in rock history

Read more: <http://www.nydailynews.com/entertainment/...ing-Aretha> Franklin isn't only the queen of soul. She's also the top woman in rock - at least according to the editors of Rolling Stone.

The magazine gave her the No. 1 spot on its just-revealed list titled "Women Who Rock: The 50 Greatest Albums of All Time."

Aretha nabbed the title for her 1967 disc "I Never Loved A Man The Way I Love You."

Clearly, "rock" takes on an elastic shape, as the list also includes the literate acoustic musings of Joni Mitchell (whose "Blue" lands at No. 2), while the No. 3 slot goes to British blue-eyed soul singer Dusty Springfield, for 1969's "Dusty In Memphis."

The list also takes a whimsical view of gender. Fleetwood Mac's "Rumours" made the Top Ten, even though the band at that time contained more men than woman (three to two).

Patti Smith, Adele, Missy Elliott, Blondie, The Supremes and Bikini Kill round out the Top 10.

The magazine is also launching a contest Friday, in partnership with Garnier Fructis, for readers to vote on an emerging female artist to appear on the back cover of a future issue.

Videos, interviews and profiles of the finalists appear on Rollingstone.com

Here's the complete Top 50 of Rolling Stone's List:

At least they're consistent where Dusty is concerned, which is good. I presume this is a poll made up from what the people associated with Rolling Stone itself have put together, rather than one voted for by peers or public. From memory, they had Dusty in Memphis in a similar position the last time I saw one. It's hard to knock Memphis but it does sort of overshadow some of her other work, Everything's Coming Up Dusty for example, which is a fabulous album. Always good to see Dusty in a high position, especially in such a well known American publication. Thanks for posting.

There's a part of you, that's a part of me...

It's truly wonderful to see Dusty in such a high position, but I'm not sure if we should take too much notice of these polls - I mean Yoko Ono and Bjork are in the top 50!! 🤔, but there is no sign of Millie Jackson's 'Caught up' (one of the greatest albums ever), nothing by Nina Simone, Gladys Knight or Peggy Lee 🙄

The 'jazz greats' - Dinah Washington, Billie Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald, along with Brenda Lee, Connie Francis and Eva Cassidy are forgotten also 🙄

I was very happy to see DIM rated that high, but I also agree that ECUD is one of the great underrated albums by any female singer of the 1960's. I have to roll my eyes everytime I read that she had to come to the States to make a "real" soul album. To me, ECUD has some great raw sounding R&B along with great pop and ballads. I don't pay much attention to polls, but I thought it was interesting as well strange as far as the rankings of some. I was dissapointed to read that Yoko's album was rated higher than Ronstadt's "Heart Like a Wheel." That's a another really good album, one of the best,IMO, by any female in the country-rock genre. I just hope when this issue comes out Dusty is given more than a passing interest blurb. I'm glad you mentioned Eva Cassidy; she was a great talent lost too soon. 🤔

🤔 I don't think much of these polls either, but I'm tickled pink that they squeezed DIM into 3rd place. 🤔

Wow!..whilst I also prefer ECUD to DIM, I am most chuffed to see Dusty at number three in this Poll. 🤔

Have you seen some of the fantastic albums which DIM has topped? 🤔 🤔

Great news !.. 🤔
