I hear Nicole Kidman's pregnant now. I wonder how/if that will affect plans...

I agree, Marty. Let's look at the positives - a big name like Kidman will raise a lot more interest in the movie than an unknown to the public at large, even if she might be better suited for the part. That's not just good for the bank accounts of the suits in Hollywood, it's also bound to have a positive effect on the popularity of our girl. Besides - Nicole Kidman is a decent enough actress, I expect a good job from her. It's the script I'd worry about. 😊

Hollywood wants a big name to play Dusty for the box office dollars! I agree that Tamsin looks very much like Dusty. IMHO, Katy Setterfield sounds much more like Dusty.

Unless you are a Dusty Fan or Australian Tamsih is an unknown.
Unless you a Dusty fan or British Katy is an unknown.

I wouldn't mind a well known actress playing Dusty and I know Hollywood can perform some it's magic to make nearly anyone look like Dusty. My biggest concern is that I WANT DUSTY TO DO THE SINGING!

FYI

Nicole Kidman and Keith Urban welcome daughter LOS ANGELES (Reuters) - Oscar-winner Nicole Kidman gave birth on Monday to her first biological child, a daughter named Sunday fathered by her husband and country music star Keith Urban. I love Keith Urban's songs- especially "Somebody Like You" and "You'll Think of Me."

I still have difficulty imagining Nicole Kidman playing the part of Dusty, and anyway, just when would she find the time? According to this report, there's already a film being made this year set in London. At this rate, she'd be in her mid 40's before she got to play the part of the young Dusty.

Nicole Kidman will star in a big Hollywood musical called Nine, due to start shooting in London in October
Nicole Kidman, Penelope Cruz and Marion Cotillard will be pulling on their leotards for dance practice when they arrive in London to star in a big Hollywood musical.

The award-winning actresses will be joining Judi Dench and Sophia Loren (although I somehow feel those two stars don't rehearse in a leotards these days).

They all play the numerous women in the life of a top film director going through a personal and professional crisis. It's based on Federico Fellini's classic 1963 film 8 1/2.

Anthony Minghella wrote a draft of the screenplay before he died. The director will be played by Daniel Day-Lewis, and the film is called Nine.

It will be shot at Shepperton Studios for five months starting in October, although many of the stars may fly into town in September to prepare for the project, backed by Harvey Weinstein's The Weinstein Company.

It's a major boost for British-based hair and make-up designers, technicians, carpenters and other crew members.

Nine is being directed and choreographed by Rob Marshall, who made the Oscar-winning movie Chicago.

Weinstein is a great lover of stage musicals. Indeed, he's an all-round theatre fan. He has been a producer, with others, of several shows and this year his efforts have garnered 23 nominations for the Tony awards, which are being handed out in New York on Sunday.

Looks like shes got a lot on her plate..
I could see her doing an older Dusty....but not young Dusty.

If all those rather good actresses are in it, Nicole may be playing a cameo type role that won't take too long. Maybe she's in London too for the Dusty role or to research it?

She's too tall for Dusty of course but she's a great enough actress to deal with the complexities of the role. I've seen her mainly in her more serious movies and she's been great in all of them. I think she'll do a brilliant job - if this film ever gets produced.

The Nicole Kidman movie has moved to script stage and will be produced by Nicole's own production company. It's set to be made or released in 2009. Looks like it's for real.
