Today, I met a friend for lunch in an area of Manchester called Spinningfields or to be more precise, Leftbank. Cas, Moira and I had lunch there when we all met up for the first time in many moons last year. That day we went to Cafe Rouge and today I went next door, to Zizzi, which I've been too a few times before. What I'd never noticed before today though was that in the restaurant on the other side, Gourmet Burger Kitchen, was a picture of Dusty on the wall facing the street. She's in her rightful place between a couple more icons, James Dean and Audrey Hepburn. I was particularly thrilled because for a long time I've wondered why Dusty wasn't up there with the others. Her image is so iconic, it was just waiting to happen. Maybe this is the first of many.

One side (this one) faces the offices and shops and the other side of the restaurant is on the river, hence Leftbank. So girls, where do we eat next? They had veggie on Cas.

Great pictures Carole. That's so true as well.

And the particular image of Dusty was very appropriate, I notice, Carole ;)

Great to see Dusty instead of a pic of Elvis or Marilyn for a change! 🍋

The Victorian red brick building to the right of Cafe Rouge looks like it may have once been something interesting Carole? 🍋

I hope it is the first of many too. I've often wondered why she didn't appear more in the UK and was frustrated to see so many American icons instead!

Well even if they didn't do Veggie its still the ideal place for me just to sit and watch you both eat 🤤🤤 I'd say that would be THE place Friday 😊😊

Sorry you 2 that I am not going to make it tomorrow, so if you do eat here remember you have to take me there some time in the future. Have a great lunch.
