I've heard from two different sources about the possibility of there being a "Dusty night" on American Idol. Anyone over the ocean heard anything similar?

well we have to find out, who lives in america? come on everyone over there, do some looking for us. can you imagine, there is so much amazing talent in this years american idol its untrue, i love the show and never miss it. There are some REAL voices on there, i know that lot of people hate these shows etc etc, i love singing, i love singers, so if there is a show full of them someones gotta be good surely? I must stress though, this year is exceptional. Please let this be true. the only clue ive got, is that in a series of X-factor over here, there was a singer called rowetta, she had this huge tunnel of a voice, and simon cowell was her mentor, and he chose YDHTSYLM for her to sing, cos he said he wanted a fantastic song to showcase her voice. Sadly she murdered it, BUT im wondering if simon is a dusty fan, and maybe he`s behind it, i do hope so

😊 I have been watching AI regularly this season & would be amazed if they had a Dusty night. However undeservedly Dusty just doesn't blip that loudly on the radar of American popular consciousness. With the exception of the Beatles AI only seems to devote entire episodes thematically to a single artist when that artist appears on the show as mentor as with Diana Ross & Barry Gibb & even though Dolly Parton is set to mentor the coming episode the general concensus is that the theme will be country music in general.

The first episode of AI to go to the viewer vote this season was a 60s themed show on which finalist Ramiele Malubay sang YDHTSYLM - if AI were planning a Dusty night it's very poor planning to make her signature song available for a prior show. Ramiele actually acquitted herself well on the song - see for yourself at <http://youtube.com/watch?v=c12aTkY4Tus> but hasn't distinguished herself since. I'm wondering if perhaps rumours of an AI Dusty night might have been fed by a Village Voice article on AI dated March 19 that contained the statement: "The judges should grant Ramiele Malubay a special dispensation to let her only sing Dusty Springfield songs, since she can't seem to make sense of anything else!"

I don't watch American Idol but I think that they had a 60's female singer episode last season in which there was a contestant that sang YDHTSYLM...not very well I heard..why do they always pick one of the most difficult songs? 🤔...I don't know why I am not a fan of singing shows since I love music so much..but I do enjoy watching the dance shows (Dancing w/ the Stars) 😊

I haven't heard anything....🤔

I don't really watch the show either...but that would give a reason to watch it..if they did that lol
