I have no doubt that many of you are already familiar with this interview, from the Bulletin if not from online. However, it's the first time I have read it and it was very touching and moving and really quite lovely. I wanted to post the link in case anyone else hasn't read it either.

After reading the poem by Walter Rinder (quoted in this article) a year or so ago, I found him on the internet he is still alive and selling his poetry. He wrote a nice letter back. I told him how his poetry touched Dusty and bought the book of poetry that this poem comes from which he signed for me.

How lovely, Kathy. The poem clearly meant a great deal to Dusty, for her to keep it on the wall above her bed for so long. Very appropriate words, too.

A quote from the poem is in my profile as a favourite quote.

>>Lovely..<<

Yes that was precisely what I thought when I read it. Really lovely.
