Memph, did you ever hear Sandie sing in German? She sings Du weisst nichts von deinem Glück (Long live love)

Hello Frans. I don't have any Sandie tracks in German. She really went for Europe didn't she? I prefer some of her French versions to the English. German is not my favourite language but it's not too bad. Here's Sandie's not so favourite hit (Puppet On A String) in German:

I haven't heard Long Live Love in German. I'm about to buy a couple more Sandie CDs so I can. Thanks Frans.

I was so glad to see Sandie having such a blast and being appreciated. I wonder what Dusty would've been like if we could have seen her perform 'White Heat'!

Thanks for that Memphis... Shattered my 'image' of Sandie once again..

For a start... She was wearing shoes!.*Stands back in amazement*...☺

Talking of Sandie.. were you aware that she had a foot operation a couple of years ago?

PS My PC broke down t'other day. Now it's back from hospital I can't download from Sendspace. What the heck is happening. Another PC adventure I think or maybe just a re-boot. I'll think about that tomorrow...

Well, you'll be pleased to know I quite like her now. I've never given her any credit at all, I thought she was just this girl with no shoes on from the Eurovision thing. I've watched quite a few of the videos, and she does have something uber cool about her, strangely enough, even for present day times she would be quite cool. I like a few of the songs and she has a nice voice, I had put her in with Cilla, whose voice when she let rip down her nose, IMHO, could curdle milk. So, you learn something new every day, so I'll go get a CD, which one, oh knowledgeable ones?

Hi Neil. It really depends if you just want the hits. If so I'd recommend 'Very Best of Sandie Shaw' which has all her best hit songs.

That's very bizarre!! I was back on her site earlier this evening and then went to iTunes to see what they had (they had quite a lot) and THAT was the album I thought I would buy. How odd.

>>she does have something uber cool about her .. even for present day times she would be quite cool<<

I couldn't agree more, Neil.

I watched the second part of the Queens of Pop last night and loved the Annie Lennox and Alison Moyet bits. I dont know how Halliwell got in there though. I hope Amy sorts herself out as she is a great talent and I loved that the shows credits rolled to Dusty and none of the others I think that means something dont you??

I thought I'd taped last nights episode, but it seems I didn't. I guess I can pick it up on iPlayer and f/f through Geri!

I saw it too and really smiled when Dusty sang over the credits. 😊

I thought it was another really well done show. I was glad they didn't focus on Amy's bad times. The focus was on her artistry. It was good to remember how great she was and still can be now she appears to be getting her life back together.

Annie Lennox was the star I thought. We kind of took everything for granted in the 1980s but looking back Annie was really quite special even radical. It's her intelligence about everything. And her images, her fabulous voice and songs (and those fabulous blue eyes). Pop music is so staid and conservative nowadays.

But more importantly I think it's FAB that Neil 'quite' likes Sandie and is buying a Sandie album! I was going to recommend the E.P. collection because it's excellent and makes for a really good over view of Sandie's 60s glory days but I checked and it's been deleted.

From what I saw Carole you'll need to f/f through Minogue and Halliwell - I had to turn off it was so bad!
Annie Lennox was good , although I still prefer her Eurythmics stuff to the solo material. Alison Moyet has a great voice, but she is hardly a 'queen of pop'. Missed Amy - so can't comment.

Alison Moyet is great but maybe too down to earth to be a diva and including Geri Halliwell is perhaps a sign of our times.

Great show - even though only seen first episode. Made me appreciate Sandie Shaw a lot more.
