Hi everyone! having just watched 'Soul Britannia' on BBC 4 (a programme about the impact of Carribean and American music on British music and society) there was a clip showing Dusty singing 'I can't hear you no more' on a box, a few words from VW, then a clip of 'Mountain', my question is who are the two Backing singers accompanying Madeline on this song, the singer in the middle has thick black-rimmed Glasses, and a small blonde bouffant, and the other singer has straight dark hair (a bit Julie Felix looking).....the backing singer in the middle looks familiar, but I really can't place her!

Mark,
I have just checked the end credits of the show that featured 'Gonna build a mountain' on my 'Dusty at the BBC' dvd. As well as enjoying watching the performance again, I can confirm that the 3 singers were Madeline Bell, Maggie Stredder and Lesley Duncan.
If Maggie Stredder (the tall blonde singer with the large glases) seems familiar, you may remember her as a member of the Vernons Girls and also as a member of well known backing trio from the sixties, The Ladybirds.
Apologies again for using the same avatar. Hopefully it won't confuse too many people.

Dez.

Thank you for the reply Dez!.....I had a feeling the one on the far right could be Lesley, it was Maggie I knew but couldn't place!.....I certainly remeber the Ladybirds backing on TOTP, it's probably the Glasses that stuck in my mind!

Plus the Vernons girls reunited a short time ago for a TV interview (one being Kim Wilde's mother), and again, that's where she was!

And Maggie charmed us with quite a few appearances at Dusty Day. She's a really lovely lady and still looks amazing.
