Remembering DS

■ by st louis blues » Sat Mar 16, 2013 5:32 am

I hope this does not seem a little strange, but I stumbled across a website called "find a grave" while looking for info on my grandparents. Just for the heck of it I typed in some info on famous musicians to read their obits and you can leave notes and virtual flowers, etc. I entered Dusty's name and then decided to read the memorials. There are almost 2,000 entries. Many just left little pics with the words RIP, but others left messages. The newest entry from just a few weeks ago caught my eye. This was posted:

RIP Dusty one hell of a singer
William "Smokey" Robinson.

I decided to scroll through and found a nice little virtual pic and it read Vickie Wickham. I found another that just Norma and I wondered if that could be Dusty's Norma. Anyway, it was nice to see her remembered on the website.

I am a little confused with this web page. Having looked through some of it, it does not seem to relate solely to DS - many are obvious for Dusty but others are for maybe Marilyn, Jane Russell, Elvis etc etc. There would appear to be messages from VW. LE an H Reddy but who knows if they are genuine? Also I don't understand the anonymous ones. Maybe it's me being thick.

I'd rather see the world the way it used to be.....

..I'm goin' back.

I haven't seen this site, though I believe I've heard about it. Interesting, and nice, that Smokey Robinson would leave a comment. Can you post a link?
