Thank you for posting these. Love the 2nd one especially.

Maybe Will can do some cleanup?

Why does Dusty's hand look so big in the last one?
(Caption thread?)

I really don't like that aqua outfit and don't think it's flattering on Dusty.

The wig looks very wiggly in the top photo, don't you think? I you get that thing where one of her eyes looks more open than the other, that I've noticed in a number of pics.

Here they are! However, I am going to remove them if someone doesn't comment on 1. what they think of the blue outfit in photo 2; 2. why does Dusty's hand look so big in the photo with La Burt?

Thanks again to Will for scrubbing Dusty up.

As I am sure the lovely Tim would also tell you, Dusty's hand looks larger because of a thing called "fore-shortening" - in an image, those parts closest to (in this case) the camera lens appear larger, a little out of proportion. Of course they aren't really, it's simply an illusion of sorts. In the right circumstances a good artist can use the illusion to good effect.

As for the blue image, note that the monstrosity that was obscuring Dusty has now been removed. But I have to say I like the colour on her. Sure, it's a little dated looking now, but all the same, I like it.

I also have to note that the final image is, I think, quite, quite stunning. In fact I would perhaps go so far as to say it has instantly become my favourite photo of her - for me, it simply captures the very essence of what and who I imagine Dusty to be. Absolutely gorgeous. That one was a real pleasure to work on.

Agree with you on the last image, Will. She always looks so divine in that dress IMO.

What monstrosity did you remove from the second photo, as the outfit is still there! The color is fine, but....

I Like the first one, she looks very young on there. I'm not keen on the second one, I don't like the dress, it looks more like a dressing gown, and I never like any of the photos Dusty had done when she was in her 30's. I loved her look in her 20's and I think she turned into a raving beauty in her 40's. I absolutely love the one with Burt, of both of them actually, and I love the last one too.

Have I got to comment on the hand Nancy to stop you taking them off. Oh ok. I don't think it looks out of the way big. Dusty always had long fingers, pianist fingers I think, and then she had long nails on to exaggerate her fingers, so the hand looks quite normal I think. Just my opinion.

No I don't think she has, but neither do I think her hand is in a foreshortened position. It's flat to Burt's jacket. Foreshortened would be if she had her hand out pointing directly to us - with us looking straight down her arm. It may be that the camera has distorted her hand somewhat by making it the focal point. But I've always been fascinated by her hands, I always thought she had pianist fingers, if you look at the picture I did for Cor, the one where she's holding her two hands up almost in front of her face, well I think her hands look quite big on that one too, here again it may be because they are nearest the camera. Cameras do strange things don't they. In actual fact Burt's hand is the one that is more foreshortened I think.

If you take her hand from the tips of her fingers up to the beginning of the bracelet, it takes up approx half the width of the jacket. Now I've just measured my own up against a similar size jacket and it takes up just about the same space. I think it is just a slight optical illusion created by the camera.

The other thing that occurred to me is that you have a white hand on a black background, this in itself can cause an optical illusion, artists sometimes darken an edge to make a highlight stand out more. Just a thought.

Thanks for the explanation about the hands Will, I wondered about that too. If you look at Burt's hands, they almost look like ape hands! (Well to me anyway!)

On the one with Burt, which was a Bulletin cover a few years back, the size of her hand always puzzled me a little. She had beautiful hands and I think in this case, she is very thin, probably making her fingers look even longer.

The last one from The Talk of The Town was in the Good Times booklet, so if you have the CD, you have seen it before! I'm with the 'no's' on the blue dress, it was too heavy and sort of drowned her, as did the wig!

Yeah I think she just has really long fingers, and white hands against a black jacket, AND look at how thin her wrist is in that photo...just a bit of an optical illusion?

I agree with you Will, the last photo is absolutely stunning and has captured the exact hand movement!

I thought Dusty looked too thin in that BB pic too. I saw the wrist as part proof of that--wonder if that is an optical illusion too.

I agree about the wig, Carole, never liked it. Same one she is wearing when she sings LOL in the white pantsuit? Fake tan?

And Burt's paw looks a bit strange too---so dark. I think they were both tanned to a fare the well--or perhaps it's just the lighting.

My, haven't we started an interesting discussion. You've all done your part, however, and the threat of removing the photos is removed!

I have to concede to Wendy who is, of course absolutely right. Foreshortening would be that effect where if, for example, her hand was at an angle toward the viewer, her arm appeared shorter. In this case, it is simply an effect of the lens used and nothing more than that. But at least if foreshortening ever gets a mention in Trivial Pursuit... ;)

Glad I'm not the only one here who thinks that last, full length shot of Dusty is absolutely stunning.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but doesn't she wear the same pink dress in an inlay photo of 'Classic and Collectibles'? The one of her in the middle of a field?

I'd check myself but my copy is in England. :-/

The dress in the field was more a casual skirt and blouse I'd say. The pink dress here is from The Springfield's days and Dusty actually wore it for their last performance at the Palladium. She also wears it on the Dutch TV show where she sings IOWTBWY and Once Upon A Time.

Really like the shot from Morcambe and Wise and the "eyes" caps are, as always, stunning 😊

Is this at the Palladium or on Dutch TV?

I LOVE this clip. It is filmed so well...the lighting is fantastic.

I'd also suggest you watch it with the sound OFF so you can focus on her moves and eyes. Amazing.

Lovely photos, all, Jonny, thank you!

It's the Dutch TV show Nancy. The first time I saw that clip when it came out of DVD, I was blown sideways. I thought she looked so luminous, her eyes are lit up and she looks so exuberant. I sometimes do watch certain things with the sound down Nancy, it's a strange quirk but I guess you have it too!

There are really not too many ways of listening to and/or watching Dusty. There's always something new to discover or a deeper appreciation of what you've loved before. In this way, she is like a classic film or work of literature.

But back to this clip....I'm assuming it is quite early in her solo career. I just love the energy--the light in her eyes, the cute little dance moves--it is wonderful snapshot of a total star in the making and a forecast of fantastic things to come.

I can't stop looking at the eyes.

Is it just me....I think Dusty was SO much better looking than her brother. I know some people (Tab Hunter 😊) find Dion quite the looker--he just does nothing for me.

~"Don't forget about me now baby"

Posted - 13/05/2008 : 15:10:40

Well he shouldn't really do anything for you, should he Nancy? 😊

I don't really find any men from back in the day attractive, they all looked the same and wore the same thing!

Loving these photos of Dusty, i like the pink dress one like everyone else too 😊

Believe it or not, I do find some men attractive, Clare, although that doesn't necessarily mean I want to do that Aussie root thing with them. 😊 You know, similar to how you probably feel about Dusty...she's quite attractive! 😊

I'd name some, but it's too far off topic. 😊

So, anyone else want to comment on Dusty v Tom in the looks dept?

~"Don't forget about me now baby"

Posted - 13/05/2008 : 20:31:04

well..sorry to say...but I don't really care for Dusty's eyebrows in the pic with her brother.....she's kinda got the Joan Crawford eyebrow thing going in that pic lol.....or is it just me? lol

No Nancy, it ain't just you. Even as a happily gay man, I'm with you on that one. And did Tab Hunter have the hots for Dion? I didn't know that!
