Thanks Josh. I'll listen to these tonight. Last year I listened to as many of the artists that Dusty covered as I could. I found that in nearly all cases Dusty delivered a much better performance. She can't be beaten but on a couple of tracks she is matched. That was a big lesson for me.

I could also tell that Dusty was able to take her time with her songs (most are very carefully crafted) but the other artists probably weren't able to because they weren't in control of the recording sessions.

I love Diana Ross but I can't stand her version of 'Can't Give Back...'. I got it recently on a great CD by her but couldn't get through this track! That's because Dusty's version is 100 times better.

Its always good to listen to other versions of songs Dusty sang.

In some cases these are the originals and others are covers.

I like the Baby Washington rendering of THHAM.

Being a Righteous Brother fan I too like their version.

The Cilla one I'm not so keen on...too nasal for me and abit hard sounding in places.

Dusty brings much more emotion and meaning to IJDKWTDWM
 The same can be said for Dusty's version of I Think Its Gonna Rain Today.

Some new ones on me here..hadn't heard Evie Sands or Steve Alaimo before.

I think Everyday I have To Cry is so well sung by Dusty that it would be difficult for any other version to come near to it.

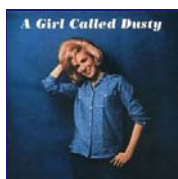

Thanks for giving me the chance to listen to all these Josh 😊

I literally have hundreds of songs by other artists of songs Dusty recorded - some originals, others copies. In nearly all cases I prefer Dusty's recordings 🙄. One exception that stands out is the original Velvelettes recording of 'Needle in a haystack' - this is one Dusty didn't pull off as well as the original, but her version is still great. I might have mentioned this before, but if you want to hear a great version of SOAPM listen to the Hanne Boel version - it's completely different - more 'rocky', but one I'm sure Dusty would have approved of.

BTW - Justine Washington IS Baby Washington - Justine was her real name 'Baby' was a nickname
 Some albums list it Justine - others Baby.

Judy Collins version of I Think It's Gonna Rain Today does not even compare to Dusty's immaculately emotional yet beautiful version!

But I do love Betty Everett's original Can't Hear You...

Judy Collins version of 'I Think It's Going To Rain Today' is beautiful but the best version belongs to Nina Simone. She gets right into the core of the song and it rips my heart right out.

Diana Ross's version of 'I Can't Give Back The Love I Feel For You' is weak compared to Rita Wright's wonderful original & Dusty's cover.

No one can do 'Goin' Back' like Dusty.

I know that Dusty sings 'I've Been Wrong Before' better than Cilla but I still prefer her version.

Baby Washington & Tommy Hunt's original are very good but Dusty has the edge.

I prefer the Mirettes & Evie's versions of 'Take Me For A Little While' not that there's anything wrong with Dusty's.

A great collection there, Josh. I will enjoy listening to those. I agree, Dusty usually comes out on top.

Thanks, Alice! Agnetha may not have the power in her vocals that Miss Dusty does, but she does have a beautiful voice. It's a very good version.
