Terry Manning DIM photographs

■ by st louis blues » Tue Jan 22, 2013 4:03 am

I was reading an article on DIM and there was a photo of Dusty in the studio during these sessions. It was taken by Terry Manning who was assisting Tom Dowd. Remember the photo of Dusty and Tom Dowd in the studio during DIM that was printed in Mojo a few years ago? Terry Manning was the photographer. I did a little more digging and Manning was quite nice as far as his comments about her. It appears he was a fan. He also went on to say he took tons of photographs at that session, but he was not going to release them yet. It seems he photographed many famous musicians during his time working in various recording studios. I hope one day he decides to release those pics. Makes me wonder how many other pictures of Dusty that were taken and have never been released.

That would be good if Terry did release more of the photos taken at that session. It'd be brilliant.

Aren't you lucky, Neil! 😊

The expression on Dusty's face is simply wonderful. Listening intently, and you wonder what's going on inside her mind...

I wonder "What's she looking at?" It's more like she's scoring a movie and looking at a screen than listening to a playback. Is she looking at a speaker?

Or maybe one of the famous American Sound Studios' rats falling out of the ceiling. 😄

RATS?!?! 😄 I find her gaze rather introspective. Sometimes you have to fix your eyes on something irrelevant to be able to listen properly.

There's this photo as well, though not sure if it's the same photographer.

Hello everyone, and thanks for remembering both Dusty, and my photographs.

I took all of the good ones on this page, ha ha...meaning all except for the first one and the other "flashed" one with DS in the white-ish dress. Those two would have been taken NOT in Memphis on the DIM tracking sessions, but rather most likely in New York when they redid some lead vocals.

My shots were taken at American Studios in Memphis, during said tracking sessions. (I did not use flash.)

I have many more, and will soon include a few in a photography Gallery Exhibit which will be showing in (so far) Boston, NYC, San Francisco and Champaign, IL (Chicago area). There will probably be other shows added in other locations, and I am certainly hoping for one or more in the UK.

Thanks again, Dusty Forever! (I am still in love...)

Terry Manning

Best regards!
