The Dave Clark 5 and Beyond: Glad All Over

by countrycake » Fri Feb 06, 2015 5:36 pm

The February edition of Record Collector magazine contains a news item about this documentary. The piece lists various names from the pop/rock world who will be talking about the DC5 and goes on to say, 'as well as unseen band footage from Dave Clark's personal archives of Stevie Wonder, The Rolling Stones, The Who, Dusty Springfield, The Supremes....'. RC reported that this was to be broadcast by BBC2 on 7 February. However, the BBC website shows that transmission will be on Saturday 14 February at 2205 in England and Northern Ireland, while BBC2 Scotland is showing it slightly later at 2305. BBC2 Wales has it on at 0040 in the morning of Sunday 15 February.

The info on the BBC website indicates that Dusty and others will be seen in old Ready, Steady, Go footage. As you all probably know, Dave Clark owns all surviving editions of RSG.

Glad you've alerted the UK fans to this special.

We've already seen it here in the states, but perhaps you'll get more footage.

Just a snippet of Dusty from RSG.

Until then, if you haven't seen it before, this Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame induction of The Dave Clark Five is well worth the time. Tom Hanks is amazing:

Nice to see the clips of this thumping beat group. I well remember dancing to "glad all over" and bits and pieces at the top rank in Cardiff. It had a sprung floor and used to bounce when everyone was stamping their feet to the drums from Dave Clark. 😊

I loved Mike Smith he was so handsome. 😊

Dusty appeared in the clips 1 and a half hrs into the programme, it was when she hosted RSG and interviewed the Beatles and then they showed her briefly singing "All cried out "

Dave Clark narrated some of the show and talked about owning the Masters of the songs and how he bought Rsg.

enjoyed the programme although for me ,there wasnt enough about them as individuals and what they all did after they stopped playing etc.

the Tom Hanks induction played a big part in the whole documentary. 😊 dont think any of us from those times think they were anywhere near the Beatles or Stones but Dave Clark is very fond of himself and as controlling as ever. He placed the group very highly in pop history in this programme but tries to deceive himself and us methinks.

Just wish he would share what he is keeping back with the rest of us Before its too late. 😞

Really enjoyed the programme. 😊 Never knew how massive the band were, especially in America. 😊 Dave Clark certainly has/had charisma and like was said they were 'different' from the norm with the Saxophonist and the thunderous drums, and maybe that was what set them apart from other bands like The Hollies, The Animals and The Kinks. Good looking blighters too. 🙌

I quite enjoyed this programme, second half more than first. As we know, clever boy that he is, purchased a lot of tapes from the '60s. In this weeks TV schedule magazine from the "Mail" there is an article regarding this documentary. Here is a brief edited extract. Although the master tapes of almost all the TV pop shows of that time such as RSG , Thank Your Lucky Stars and Juke Box Jury had been erased and lost forever here, DC tracked down copies that had been sold to other countries and bought up the rights to as many as he could find. He also tracked down special shows of Otis, Beatles, Stones and Dusty....."We got all the great people" says DC. "Every time I added something from the 60s to my collection I thought it would be nice in years to come for the new generation to experience what we did".

To which I say, THE NEW GENERATION IS HERE NOW !, PLEASE PLEASE CAN WE SEE THEM !

Albeit that I , like so many on LTD, are of his time we would like a little peep and be reminded of what they did.

I'd rather see the world the way it used to be.....

..I'm goin' back.

The comment from Dave Clark that he wanted future generations to experience what was on the tapes of 60s TV pop programmes rings a bit hollow. The problem seems to be that he wants to charge so much for the use of clips from RSG! etc that TV producers do not find it economically viable to license material from him.

One of BBC documentaries about Dusty wanted to use footage of the RSG! Motown Special to accompany the interview with Martha Reeves, but the cost was so great that It could not be afforded. The end they filmed Martha talking while she was watching the footage off-screen.

The problem marketing those tapes, especially RSG, lies in the fees demanded by all the different companies that own the rights to the music performed on the shows. Dave Clark has said he'd hoped the rights would have been in the public domain by now, but the EU changed the rules.

Yes and in relation to my earlier post, just to say that the documentary on DC5. was produced and directed by him.....

enough said I think. 😊 he needs to get his controlling ego out of the way and let this hoard of his be seen and enjoyed. Surely that's the point of saving them. 🙄 🙄

With this new EU copyrights bill, DC is a bit stuffed as presumably a lot of his collection will not be available for many years yet. I hope, if I am still around and compass I may be able to see them.

Funny that this has been brought up. Now I don't deny the problems with music rights issues, which plague reruns and home releases of shows here in the US. (We had to wait ages to finally get DVD sets of WKRP and Wonder Years because of this, for instance) But from what I heard, Clark has always come off as stingy with allowing RSG to be re-aired. I just read a story on YouTube that made me lose a bit more respect for him...about a dying man who requested an episode he appeared on, but was turned down by Dave Clark.

Brilliant program, but a shame what a lot of the people behind the scenes have become...have I mentioned that it's been 15 years since a certain hack biographer did her dirty work?

On a lighter note, didn't the Disney Channel rerun RSG episodes in the US in the '80s?
