As I wont be around a computer on March 2nd, I just wanted to add my little tribute to Dusty here and now. It's hard to believe where the years have gone, I remember so well that night 8 years ago as if it were yesterday. I remember waiting next day for the news to hit the TV and radio and then hearing it confirmed by Richard and Judy on their programme and I remember how upset they seemed and how numb I felt. She was on every news programme looking so lovely and full of life and the next day, all the papers were full of headlines like "The Day the Music Died" or "Dusty, the Voice That Haunted a Generation". It was just so incredibly sad. I remember the funeral and the surreal feeling being in the church, the silence during 'Goin' Back' and the way I felt watching the car and the casket drive away. So much has happened since then and Dusty's incredible legacy just keeps on growing and gaining in strength. She was sublime, the voice of voices, pure class. Plus, she also had the best bouffant.

Ladies and gentlemen, Miss Dusty Springfield

Carole,
That was really nice..I'm sure your sentiments will be echoed amongst many..though your memories were right there in many Dusty moments...now, that is one wild picture of Dusty...ok, is that hair style caused by one giant fan or a case of Aquanet? 🤔 have fun,

No one says it better than you, Carole.

You inspired my moment of silence thread.

Carole's comments about Dusty's incredible legacy made me think about the various legacies besides her incredible voice and the music she left us. I was wondering if everyone would like to talk about what Dusty's legacy means for and to them?

Perhaps I should start since I introduced this 😊 I think many on LTD have had the "someone to talk to/guardian angel/cheeky friend experience. Beyond that, for me Dusty's love of soul music and cats (all animals) lives on (especially in Washington!). My sister gave me a little plaque that says Time with animals is added to you life! If only that were true, Dusty would be with us now.

i forgot to post about this earlier, but i was told that on March 2nd's episode of Countdown, Richard Digance spoke a poem about people who were born/died on that day. in the middle of said poem was a line about Dusty: "On this day in 1999, Dusty Springfield heard the words of a preacher man for the last time."

It seems incredibly strange and a little eerie to me, but I feel like I was at Dusty's funeral. Everytime I read about it, I get this familiar feeling like I was there or something. Maybe I'm just nuts. Whatever the case may be, it's sad to know that she is no longer with us.
