"The One And Only" winner to give low-key concert

By Tom Pochciol

Comment

KATY Setterfield, winner of the BBC's "The One and Only" reality TV show, will be giving an intimate concert in Marlow later this month.

The 37-year-old singer from Gerald's Road, Terriers, will be performing at Sir William Borlase's Grammar School in West Street on March 30. Only 200 tickets will be available for the exclusive concert.

Mrs Setterfield shot to fame after she won the reality TV show in which she impersonated her idol Dusty Springfield. As such, half of the concert will feature Mrs Setterfield as herself, the other as Dusty.

Jo Noel-Hartley, who was a musical consultant and pianist on the show, will be performing with Mrs Setterfield.

She said: "It's a chance for Katy to express herself as well as the side that the audience saw on "The One and Only".

"It's going to be very low key, and because she has such a huge fanbase, we know tickets are going to go very quickly."

Anyone interested can get more information at Mrs Noel-Hartley's website at www.jamtheatre.co.uk/

I don't know what the truth is behind whether the acts got paid or not but if they didn't, then my guess is it said that in the contract and it would then be their choice whether or not they wanted to do it. I find it strange though that no payment should be made.

Had a mail from Katy and Andy today, it seems that they have never been so busy. As well as the small gig in Marlow, they are planning a tour in the Autumn with 50 plus dates around the country doing a 2 hour concert that will be primarily Dusty. Vegas begins on May 19th, with a weeks rehearsals before that.

I hope it's not true. Kind of puts a damper on all the "One and Only" excitement.

As the acts were in fact on a talent show and they weren't celebs as on Strictly Come Dancing or others of that ilk, it's quite possible they didn't get payment but were in it for the promotion and the chance of winning. Either way, it hasn't taken anything away from the glee I felt each time Katy went through or the absolute joy when she won. Taking part in the show was one of the most enjoyable things I've ever done and I'd do it all again tomorrow!

Regardless of the facts behind the story that was mentioned, I also will never forget how exciting it was watching Katy become more Dustyesque each week until that absolutely thrilling climax on the Finals night. It was SUCH an exciting night, which is unusual for me, because I don't normally get into that kind of thing at all. My phone bill couldn't bear it lol.

I'm also delighted to hear that Katy will be touring - only hope some of the dates are up here in Scotland :)

Well, there is a train on the sunday morning, i would get to marlow about 4pm, then i will need a hotel for the night, and then a train journey back the next day. its about 4 and a half hours to get there and four changes, and the same coming home. Im in such a dilemma, I would love to go really i would, It would make the whole "one and only" thing complete for me, im just not certain if im brave enough to do it alone, im worried i might panic at some point, and no jason to help calm me down. He has also expressed a few concerns about me being alone, and as he is away for a week, he thinks i shouldnt go. I just dont know what to do. I keep thinking that if i cant get to vegas then this may be my only oppurtunity.

Neil, go if you can make it, feel ready to do it and are safe to do it. But if either you or Jason have any concerns, then don't - it's simply not worth it (lovely though I'm sure it will be). And remember, Katy will be at Dusty Day and there will be plenty of other opportunities for both you and Jason to consider going to see her. This particular journey sounds long and fairly arduous.

Don't stress about it Neil, if I could, I would come with you, any other weekend and I would have driven down and picked you up. If the journey is too much of a trial, I'd let it go and wait for DD and then the autumn tour. Those Sunday train journeys are a nightmare, I did 6 weeks of 'em.

Last year's intimate performances by Madeleine, Simon, Kay, Jonathon etc - proved that point I think. I'm sure you won't be disappointed, Neil.

It seems the decision to go and see katy has been taken out of my hands. Last night Jason played the " I absolutely forbid it" card. I did throw a tantrum, and stormed off to bed, but on reflection, it was getting me so stressed and anxious trying to sort it out, that today i feel quite relieved. Although i havent said so to Jason just yet. Im still walking around with a hurt expression on my face. I'll tell him after tea.

Why don't both of you make a trip to Vegas Neil?

Marty

Posted - 18/03/2008 : 18:34:17

Time and work commitments Marty, we have a lot of trips this year and there just isnt anymore time, so it would have to be an overnight thing, which would be just a bit too much given the flight time etc. I havent given up hope yet though, but theres so much going on before may, and she is there till august. We will just have to wait and see

Thank you all.

Nancy I was just about to write to you and ask if it would be ok to give it to Katy at DD on behalf of LTD in appreciation of all her efforts in raising the Dusty consciousness and all her hard work and a reminder of her time on the One and Only Tribute Show.

I had a word with Will before I started the picture and he has agreed to present it to her. If that's all ok with you then.

I feel very very honoured, not least of all because I know I am one of the 'weans' on the forum (for our non-Scottish members, it means kids or children, meaning they still have a great deal to learn). I would be more thrilled than I can say to give this to Katy on everyone's behalf if no-one has any objection.

The image itself is stunning (I know, I say that every time Wendy draws something and its always true) - but she has captured the likeness astonishingly well and done a remarkable job of the portrait (not that any of us expected any less of her) and I am sure the recipient will be thrilled. I also agree with the comment posted earlier - get those hands insured!! If Betty Grable could do it with her legs.... ;)

Yes I share that certainty, Neil and I think you are spot on there. Apart from the fact that it is an original art work (and an incredibly good one, at that), it comes wrapped in a bow of deep emotion and thanks. If I were her, I would treasure that image every day of my life. And I don't doubt that Katy will do just that.

The writer of this obviously thought Katy Setterfield and Joanna Berns were one and the same person!

Dusty tribute comes to pier

03 April 2008

THE haunting and powerful songs of the late, great Dusty Springfield come to Great Yarmouth this summer in something of a coup for the Britannia Pier.

Katy Setterfield, right, winner of BBC's The One and Only programme is confirmed as appearing at the Pier on Saturday, August 30 - her first gig in the UK after completing her three-month prize-winning contract in Las Vegas.

After years of singing, Katy entered the world of the tribute artist in 1993. Performing as Cher, she quickly realised her ability to change her voice was the key to her success.

In 2000, she was invited to audition as the new lead female vocalist in the smash hit That'll Be the Day. Belting out a couple of Cher songs the gig was immediately hers and the opportunity to learn her stage skills was born.

And along the way director Trevor Payne suggested different artists for Katy to impersonate: Tina Turner, Debbie Harry, Shirley Bassey, Sandie Shaw, Brenda Lee, Doris Day and many more were honed at this time.

But the masterstroke came with the discovery of Katy's uncanny ability to "be" Dusty Springfield. Last year, she made the decision to take vocal coaching lessons and it was her coach who suggested Katy enter the BBC1/Endemol show The One and Only.

After reaching the final 10 as both Cher and Dusty she won through to the live contest in January/February and beat 11 other contestants to the prize - a three-month performance contract in Legends, Las Vegas.

The Britannia Pier Box office is open daily from 10am (April to September) on 01493 842209.

Katy Setterfield as 'The One & Only' Dusty Springfield

10 September 7:30 PM Buy Tickets

Over 8 nail-biting weeks in January and February this year, Katy Setterfield beat off competition from singers across the length and breadth of the UK – not to mention her fellow 11 finalists – to win BBC TV's The One & Only, the search for the country's leading tribute artist, with the prize of a 3-month contract in the world-famous Legends in Concert show in Las Vegas. In Autumn 08, Katy returns from Vegas and immediately sets out on her first UK tour, taking in Buxton Opera House along the way. Don't miss the greatest tribute to Dusty you're ever likely to see, from Katy and her live band.
