I am in the process of watching YDHTSYLM several times on the bbc dvd, just to refresh in my mind her movements etc . I love that performance very much.

Katy has just given an absolutely magnificent performance of Dusty singing You Don't Have To Say You Love Me. She gave me goosebumps. The audience gave her a standing ovation and one of the judges said it was the best performance of the series so far.

Fantastic.

A great performance and a tremendous reaction from the audience! David Grant said it was 'the performance of the series so far!' She must get through!

Good comments from the critics on Katy's performance. My friend just rung me up from Brighton to say how good she was.

Really great performance from Katy. Wonderful comments from David and Carrie - pity they didn't speak to Carrie as well as David but at least picked up the words "amazing", "amazing" from Carrie just before Graham moved on to the next contestant. Still pity about the "wrong" eye make-up and not keen on the dress but felt easier when Carole sent me text earlier to say just heard Katy's rehearsal and it gave her goosebumps. No doubt the "superfans" are out celebrating again. Luck s-ds!

I am thrilled - but not in the least surprised - that Katy is now through to the next show. Had that particular song gone wrong, it could have gone very wrong. But Katy shone singing You Don't Have To Say You Love Me and the audience in the studio clearly loved it, as their spontaneous standing ovation proved.

I love Dusty's music but I certainly do not have that intimate knowledge of Dusty which many here have (and for which I envy them!) - so in that sense, I am closer to Joe Public than to the real superfan. But as such, it seems to me that while we may talk about how the gown was a slightly different shade or the hair was a little too high, for most people watching on TV, they will never have the intimacy with Dusty to even realise these little things. For them, it is simply a case of "yes, she is like Dusty - she looks and sounds like her". And I hope that is a good thing for Katy. From my own perspective, tonight I forgot it was Katy and I saw and heard Dusty, and I am delighted about that. I think I wasn't the only person to experience that, which is why Katy got the reaction she did following the song. And I hope that I am right about that because it means there is a greater chance of people wanting to hear more of the music of the real Dusty - old fans and new alike - and that is a good thing.

Just think - a few weeks ago, many people out there could not name three Dusty songs, but now they can hum them as well as name them. How good is that? :)

Well done, Katy - you deserved to go through.

So glad Katie got through. Hope someone is recording all these performances so us people not able to get BBC can see them- although the Utube clips have been great.

Absolutely Wendy!.....Coincidentally there was an article and picture in yesterdays Daily Mail about Tom Jones' long suffering wife of 50 years Linda, she's unable to return to the land of her Father's ever again because of her agrophobia.

One of Frank Sinatra's megafans reminds of Joan Collins whenever I see her!.....she made our Carole blink when she jumped up out of her seat!

Someone told me s/he thought that the Cher act would be the eventual winner. I'm wondering what others think.

How many acts are left?

Since I can't vote, should I contribute to Neil's phone bill?

Well, another fun night 🤪 Katy came down to see us before the dress rehearsal (pics later) and said how nervous she was but was really looking forward to it as well. I thought she put her heart and soul into her performance, and I can honestly say she gave me goose bumps and brought a tear to my eye. It was the whole set up that got me emotional. From our seats, Katy looking so like Dusty, the fact that she nailed those big notes, that her dad was wiping away tears and that the audience went wild at the end and gave her a standing ovation. I would never claim that Katy has Dusty's voice down to a T, but she's taking a good stab at the imitation and she's gaining a lot of praise for it. She definitely has the best voice in the show....which anyone impersonating Dusty just better have! I knew before I got there exactly which dress they would copy and I loved the hair too. Neither were exact copies but still both very Dusty. But the eyes 🤪 When Katy came to see us, I said thank goodness they had got rid of the glitter but she said that there was still a bit there. In a darkish corridor it wasn't that noticeable but under the glare of the studio lights, they shone like glitterballs! I'm going to try again to get that sorted, surely they must want to get it right?

I did look pretty shocked at "Joanie" didn't !!? Mark, she is a professional Joan Collins look-a-like and I'm surprised that her fellow Frank fans didn't clout her! They may just if she tries it again 😊

Cher does seem to still be favourite but Dusty is catching up fast, as are Lionel and Frank. I also like Diana, but she can wobble a bit. Next week there'll be a bottom three and two will go. To my mind the bottom three should be Kylie, Tom and Elton but we'll see.

LOL nancy!! Dont worry about it, its only money!!!! Call it payback for all the work you put into the tshirts.

Im thrilled katy got through, and she did nail those big notes and definitely from a Non dusty point of view she was fantastic, as many of my friends texted me after the performance. I agree with carole over the bottom three, elton definitely, he just doesnt cut it at all.

Carole, Does Katy get to choose the song she sings or she 'advised' by the TV company? Which one do you think she should go for next? I think IJDKWTDWM would go down well...

No Pat, she doesn't get to choose, it's a production/Carrie/David thing. This is taken from the One and Only website...

The producers of the show choose the songs each week based on various criteria.

After they were selected for the live shows back in December last year, all the Tribut
