Everyone at work thinks I have gone totally bonkers today. I have been raving like an eejit all day long asking people to watch the show ar every wipe-dry board I could find lol ..

I was on the phone to one of my friends a few minutes ago and she is absolutely convinced Katy will win and various people today said the show. Of course they are absolutely correct.

This is SUCH an exciting week - but what a lot of work Katy will have to do! Two new songs, as Carole said, for the first show and then, as another song. That is a lot but I have full confidence in her ability.

Now, as Nanceh said ..

GO KATY!!!

I don't think I can be of any help personally this week, as I will be out from 7.30 till about 1am or maybe later. I can only help by asking all to do so again, friends and family that is.

So good luck Katy. You're safe in Neil and Will's capable hands.

Is there a priest in the forum? I need to confess. I have done a BAD thing.

Whilst in town at the Apple Store earlier (and in case you are reading this, Heather, no I didn't buy anything!) I decided a little Katy plug w browser pages on all the Macs to a page on Katy in The One And Only.. photographic evidence attached ...

Very naughty of me, I know, and I seriously risk being banned from the Apple Store, but hey - its FINAL WEEK :)

I just watched a few performances on U-tube of Lionel Richie, Tom Jones, Elton John, Tom Jones and Cher.

I always thought that Elton John looked great from a distance while I was watching Katie, but I was disappointed with his performance.

After Katie, I liked Cher from the very little I saw.

I was just wondering if the best known in the US will play a factor into the winner. Afraid to say it, but that would make it Lionel Ritchie.

As far as talent goes, I'M 100 PERCENT WITH KATIE!

Marty
PS. Are the odds still with Lionel Ritchie? Even if they are, I tend to root for the underdog.

It hasn't been confirmed by the BBC yet Mark, but they are likely to be AISIY and Middle of Nowhere. Then should Katy get through to the be definite because things are always getting changed but these were the ones talked about last week.

This Saturday there will be two shows.

In the first show, all five remaining acts will sing two (new) songs each. At the end of this first show, two of the acts will be voted off.

In the second and final show, the three remaining finalists will each sing a song they have already sung in the competition. At the end of th chosen and announced.

Hope this helps.

From the BBC's 'The One And Only' website -

United Kingdom
7603 Posts

Joanna Berns, The One and Only...Cher
Katy Setterfield, The One and Only...Dusty Springfield
Anthony Adams, The One and Only...Frank Sinatra
Moni Tivony, The One and Only...Lionel Richie
Tony Lewis, The One and Only...Robbie Williams

What ends to happen on shows of this sort in the UK is that at the end of the first show, voting is temporarily suspended and a vote taken with the lowest votes will then leave.

In the second show, the voting resumes, in order to chose the winner - as it has been all the way, the public will vote to chose the winner show, a count taken and the final winner announced.

I should note that the BBC website gives no clues about the specifics of the voting but there is no reason to believe it will change for the f Carole may well know more about it, but I would expect this is what will happen.

STOP PRESS!!!

United Kingdom
7603 Posts

I just found this on the BBC Website for the show ...

How the show will work in The Final

The Final of The One and Only... will work differently to the previous live studio shows as the results will be based entirely on the votes cas Superstar Vote.

In the main Performance Show the five finalists will each perform a new solo song after which the vote lines will open. They will then each which the voting lines will be frozen.

At the end of the Performance Show, the two acts who have received the least number of viewer votes so far will be eliminated from the c the remaining three finalists. All votes cast once the lines have reopened will be added to any votes cast earlier in the evening.

In the Results Show the three remaining acts will each sing their favourite song from the series after which the voting lines will close for go results and reveal the winner of The One and Only...

I think the 'Superstar vote' referred to means the voting of the contestants themselves in the sing-offs each week, when they have to cho lowest vote. Clearly that will not happen this week.

So basically, the voting is as I expected.

Hope this clarifies how it will work.

I think this weeks songs are all pretty strong, though I'm not that familiar with a couple of them.

Cher - Gypsies, Tramps And Thieves and The Shoop Shoop Song
Dusty Springfield - In The Middle Of Nowhere and All I See Is You
Frank Sinatra - Come Fly With Me and The Lady Is A Tramp
Lionel Richie - My Destiny and Say You, Say Me
Robbie Williams - Supreme and Millennium

Graham Norton is on Richard and Judy in a little while, no doubt to talk about the show.

Carole x

I am curious to know if any of the competitors tore the house down like Katy did?

I can't place My Destiny or Supreme, but maybe I will when I hear them. I actually think that Cher has the strongest two, but can she get beginning? It's In His Kiss will always mean Betty Everett to me.

Graham didn't own up to who he thought would win but said that he'd been surprised at how well the older acts like Frank and Dusty were exception of Robbie, had all fallen by the roadside. They had a bit of a giggle over what Robbie looked like last week with his painted on six like a pregnant woman! Graham also jokingly (partly) said if Lionel won, he wouldn't have the services of the BBC make up department and : best to sit at the back!

I'm with you that Betty Everett owned that song.

Personally I think it would be a shame if a British show sent an American act to Vegas. Besides, Richie is still alive, isn't he? And I don't thin the US. Not to mention his songs are so boring, compared to Dusty's.

I am sure my own feelings for who should win are not at all evident here!

Has "Cher" sung Half Breed yet, BTW? I'll never forget seeing a drag Cher do that one.

I think Katy looks stunning in that image from the finalists' night out. The funny thing is, she doesn't look like someone trying to look like so looks like someone from the Sixties.

Never one to miss an opportunity (cover your eyes if you are easily offended) ...

I was at a funeral earlier... the reception afterwards proved to be remarkably effective as a vote-canvassing exercise. Of course my intenti communal dark mood, it wasn't that I especially want anyone particular in the competition to win. I'm not really bothered about the whole t already.

LOL.

Good luck and best wishes Katie, hope you are managing to keep up with everyone's posts.

LOL You need to have no worries on that score, Nancy - I will send enough votes for all of us. Sure Neil will be doing the same. And I have long in preparation for the Final. So there will be plenty of votes for all of us and still some to spare :)

I'll post again if I get a reply back from Carole (and I can't imagine how excited she must be feeling, actually being there to watch it all hap that she can't get a signal on her mobile in the BBC building.

And in tribute to the lovely Katy and as a small, thankyou, I am changing my signature line in her honour.. I listened to Dusty singing this a line, I immediately thought of Katy tonight in the Final. As Dusty says.. this is for all those ladies who are legends..

Graham Norton did make the joke on Richard and Judy, that whoever wins tonight, wins 3 months hard work in Vegas.

I emailed everyone I could think of earlier this afternoon in a last attempt to canvas as many votes as possible for Katy as Dusty. The reply to the other, promising to vote, which is really really good.

It's been a wonderful afternoon listening to so many Dusty songs as I was updating my website and the crowning moment was that picture how thrilled I was to receive that :)

And I will indeed post updates on the show as the evening progresses. I'll be recording it on the Mac so hope to get some early pictures fo

Incidentally, I have just re-read the voting guidelines on the official website and it says nothing about not accepting votes from outside of someone outside the UK trying it, remembering to use +44 and removing the first 0, so the voting number for Katy would be +449015 22 23

I don't know the running order of the acts, but I have no doubt that all of the acts - in both shows - will have the same opportunity for th time. I got the impression from what you quoted above that they were implying that there would be less time to vote for Katy.

And don't worry if the voting number above doesn't work - I and others will be voting plenty regardless;) I just thought it curious that although people abroad have not been able to vote, the terms and conditions don't specifically mention that )

PS/ I also have no doubt that it will be made perfectly clear on the show exactly what the voting procedure consists of and how it will wor Plus when they announce the lines are open to vote, they are open for all the acts - that is the way it has been all through the series.
