Has anyone (especially those who knew Dusty) ever tried to contact Tom Springfield? I realise, and respect, the fact he seems to have chosen a quiet life. But what a mine of information he could be.

I've got a good thing

My instinct tells me just Simon Bell and maybe Madeline keep in touch with Tom, Tom probably finds it too upsetting to talk about his sister which is perfectly understandable and just wants to be left with his memories, if he agreed to one interview there would be demands for more and deeper and deeper the 'questions' would probe and it would be too much, hence the justifiable silence.....

I'll try anything

I wonder would Tom do an interview about his own career?
Perhaps he just doesn't want people questioning him about Dusty.

Even without his Dusty connection though he was very successful in the 60s writing huge hits for The Seekers and others.

Interesting that when the Springfields split he moved into 'behind the scenes' writing and producing but then released two solo albums under his own name in 1968/69.

I wonder was it dis-satisfaction with these that led to his apparent retirement shortly after?

Tom Springfield is indeed an intriguing person. I wonder what he has been living off all these years, for example. Surely he can't make a living on royalties alone??

Wish Dusty could have benefitted from it when she was still alive!

But still, what did he live off during the 80s and 90s? I don't mean to suggest anything, I just wonder.

🤔 I don't think Tom holds half the secrets as does Einstein. If I could interview anyone it would be Einstein (her teddy bear), but I respect his privacy to much to disturb him! 😊 Jeffery
