Tonight's The Night

■ by daydreamer » Thu Dec 01, 2011 10:34 pm

Just spotted Dusty's name in the Saturday night TV schedule. It seems that a young lady gets to "duet" with Dusty on "Tonight's the Night" at 6.00pm on BBC1. I'm away this weekend, so I'll be recording and it'll have to wait till I get home.

Saturday, 18:00 on BBC One

SYNOPSIS

John Barrowman chooses some of his most memorable moments from the series, as well as making some brand new dreams come true. A young woman gets to sing a different style of duet with Dusty Springfield, a golf fan gets taught a few tricks by Colin Montgomerie, and The One Show's Matt Baker surprises a DJ who wants to sing. Plus some more amazing duets and performances with tenor Alfie Boe, Samantha Womack from South Pacific and the cast of Chicago.

Just seen the show - fortunately it was on early and I didn't have to suffer John Barrowman for too long!

The girl was obviously a big Dusty fan - "nobody could sing like Dusty Springfield", and the song chosen for the 'duet' was IJDKWTDWM. Lovely to see Dusty coming up in the background - very 'eerie' it was too. The girl really didn't have a great voice, but she did her best....but it was 'Dusty's great to see our Dusty being described like that and he is right, how lucky was she to sing with a legend like Dusty Springfield... 🤔

night' ! 🤔

Just watched it - when Dusty's video came on I started to cry. Amazing. I've seen it dozens of times before but this time I was looking at her facial expressions and it knocked me out. Well done piece all around.

I watched it on the iPlayer too. And like Maggie I must have watched it a hundred times before. I think they chose exactly the right song - I'm biased cause it is one of my favs. But I always watch her expression on that video Maggie, she really makes you believe every word doesn't she - it's part of her magic.

It was another Dusty night. The Legend is still wowing them. I wouldn't mind betting the YouTube hits for that video go up this weekend. Everyone will want more.

I think the close-ups they used - and the way her image rose up behind the stage is what got me. That and the fact there was a live audience and a huge TV audience that might be seeing her for the first time, or at least in a long time, is what set me off. They seemed to love it.

I was sitting in a hotel room in the wilds of North Yorkshire when this came on TV. I actually found it really moving to see Dusty being introduced on screen as she was. It looked lovely and if anyone can possibly do a screen grab with Dusty on the screen, with the lights and the girl standing to one side, I would love to see it.

For those who can get iPlayer, it's about 15 minutes in.

🤖 Poor woman got dragged off a London bus to go and perform in front of a live audience - without any warning. You can hear the tremble in her voice during the first couple of lines. She's not the best singer i've ever heard - but she was a lot better than most of the X Factor wannabees - well done her 🤖

It was great that they let Dusty sing an entire verse without the duetting, and i thought it was quite moving to see the womans friend in the audience sobbing while she was up on stage. 🤖

I'll say it again.....I think it was beautifully. I love the way Dusty is treated, so much better than that duet with the Sugarbabes.

For anyone outside the UK just download this program and keep it on your desktop. When you want to watch any UK TV just double-click and it will create a Virtual Private Network or VPN tunnel that will trick websites into thinking you are in the UK:
