first off..I'm glad Teda asked "what is j20?".I thought the lot of you had been missing the 'H' key that sits next to the 'J' on the keyboard.

Also ,on Anni's review, it doesn't surprise me that while both Patti LaBelle & Joss Stone have good voices..they both sing way over the top..much unlike the subtleness of Dusty's voice. You would think that these ladies would have heard these songs a million times & maybe TRY to emulate that sound ..just for this night.

Judging from Anni's review, I cannot wait to see it! There's nothing that makes me laugh more than Ms. Patti going OTT - which, of course, happens in every song she ever does... but, it's a hoot to watch her. Hell, she's rather subdued these days - back in the 80's she used to roll on the stage floor with that Mohawk headdress on - now there was a laugh riot! 🤪

Thanks, Ann! 😊

Thanks for your review. I can't expect that I'm surprised by Patti LaBelle. She ALWAYS oversings. She would sing a lullaby such as "Mr Sandman" as though it were Janis Joplin's "Ball and Chain." 🤪

I'm surprised by Joss Stone not showing more restraint though, she's usually a sensitive vocalist for someone so young. Maybe she was afraid of being upstaged by LaBelle.

Who received the award on Dusty's behalf?

Hello All

That's what they all say (about various fruit juices being mixed in a bottle ... hm).

Yes, it was a great night, now that I've recovered the use of my legs. But, thinking back, my God wasn't it just typical. While all the other inductees were given standing ovations and treated with euphoria, our Dust got the usual undignified display. It surely would have made her laugh.

First of all, Joss Stone, who was doing the inductive speech, was either very nervous or out of her head. Whichever, she couldn't follow the autocue, and made most of what she was saying up. Which was fine, except most of it didn't make sense. It certainly didn't sound heartfelt, what with all the stuttering delivery, and wild improvisation.

Then there was the business of Patti La Belle and her tight frock, and not getting up the stairs without showing us all her legs and very nearly her knickers. That was not long after she had massacred You Don't Have To Say You Love Me. You wouldn't have dared say you loved her after her performance.

Then there was Joss herself singing Son of a Preacher Man. Singing is a word I use politely. Shouting and bellowing more like, while strutting all around the arena and into the audience, while shoving the mike and her cleavage into people's faces. My God, it was an object lesson in how not to sing a particular song. I've got great respect for young Joss and her voice, but that was not how to do that particular song. The glory of Dusty's SOAPM is the restraint, it's what makes it so insidious and sexy, and it's why we all prick up our ears when we hear it, and why it will remain the seminal recording of it forever. But I expect Joss will learn in time.

Oh my.

Love

Patti and Nona received the award. Re Joss' performance and Patti's really, they did their own things which I personally quite liked. I wouldn't have wanted them to try (even if they could) to emulate Dusty. Opinion seemed to be quite divided about the performances - some clearly loved them, others not!!

Yes, i really liked Joss Stone singing Son of a Preacher Man and not because of the dress ( or was it a top) she was nearly wearing.

It was nothing like Dusty of course but then again, what would be the point of anyone and Joss Stone was pretty good, too - although i agree with Rob, she wasn't dressed very appropriately! 🙄

Found this at

<http://www.endemoluk.com/?q=node/285&tid=7&shownews=1>

Dusty Springfield is widely recognised as one of the greatest female singers of all time. Idolised worldwide for her powerful, emotional vocals and distinctive style, Dusty's death in 1999 at the age of 59 robbed the world of a unique talent. However, her musical legacy lives on, as remastered and reversioned releases of her classic albums ensure Dusty's popularity has never been higher.

Coming from the lovely county of Devonshire myself, indeed from the very same part of the county that Ms Stone comes from, I was 'saddened' that in such a short space of time she has managed to lose her soft Devonshire lilt! Her speaking voice was hardly recognisable from the last interview of hers I heard which couldn't have been more than a couple of months ago. How strange...

Hello, adoring fans.

I know you have all been eagerly awaiting my review of last night's show, so here it is:

Firstly I'd like to thank channel 4 for laying out a red carpet especially for yours truly - honestly, there was no need - I'm just a normal person, like Madonna or Prince! Well, apart from the fact that I'm just a tad more important..

Speaking of Prince; he was at the ceremony, too, but he didn't receive half the applause I did. Oh, the crowd went wild for me - or was that Bon Jovi? I forget.

I suppose I should post a couple of photos to prove I was actually there, so here goes:

My adoring fans & I :

My dear friend Patti LaBelle, who did a brilliant version of that blonde woman's "You Don't Have To Say You Love Me":

Speaking of "that blonde woman", here she is on the big screen:

Joss Stone, Bon Jovi, Brian Wilson, James Brown etc also performed, but you don't want to hear about that.

Yours arrogantly,

Hello All

Why is it I always look like I've got a drink in my hand even when I've not?

Yes, opinions are divided, but the point of the HoF evening was that all acts had to be LOUD. This is what TV companies think atmosphere is, they are of course wrong.

As Jonno said at the time, there WAS no atmosphere in the hall, and the loudness and flashy lighting was compensating for that. No doubt the heavily edited transmission will give the impression that everybody was having a great time. I still can't wait to see how they edit the Gordon Brown speech ...

Gather 'round!

The OFFICIAL reason Patti was doing the show has FINALLY been revealed...

yes....come closer....to the edges of your seats.....

Here it comes.....

In an interview with Radio 2, after the show - she said she lived in London for awhile and Dusty and her were friends cos they shared the same hairdresser -- Corrine.

She also said....while she hears Dusty in her head when she sings - it comes out sounding like herself....she can't help it.....

And, that she never knew about Dusty's troubles.....that she kept them a secret...and lived life to the fullest...that she was a lot of fun....

You can hear it on the Radio 2 rebroadcast of the HoF event....

and in response to your question, Birdie - Prince didn't perform, which was a shame - i'd have liked to see him live. when he picked up his award he mumbled quite a lot, so judging by that, he was probably in no fit state to sing! ☹

He has a way of becoming verrrrry shy when receiving awards...and...he is a confirmed mumbler.... I suppose adding jet-lag to the mix could only complicate things....

Thanks again for the PIX!

AND the reports/reviews...and LAUGHS....all of you.

You're gonna walk away the best part of the whole show.

Well, at least in MY livingroom, which makes you all legends.

i expect the UK folks are watching the HoF, now - i'm taping it, but due to "prior arrangements", i had to dash out, earlier; leaving the video to record an hour of the previous programme.. so i hope someone else manages to get it on DVD, and that they'll be able to make copies 🙏 i'd definitely buy one!

They seem to be doing a quarter of an hour on each inductee. So, if she's not on at 10pm, try every 15 mins after that, if you're not interested in watching the whole show; there's a wide range of artists being inducted - so not every one of them will be to every viewer's taste.

Did anyone notice that in the ad break that's come on (10.04pm) that they used the tune from "Anna" - El Baion - for the Remington ad? My ears tuned into the melody of it IMMEDIATELY!

Wonder if it was planned or just serendipity?

Well they've just come back from the ad break and it's not Dusty this time - it's Bon Jovi. Dave Stewart is one of the people doing the induction. They should have asked the other half of the Eurythmics - Annie Lennox - do be one of the ones that inducted Dusty - instead of sticky Vicki's cronies (no disrespect meant to THEM).

It's on now - and there was a clip that I've NEVER seen before - a black & white one of "I Close My Eyes & Count To Ten". Looks like it was around 1969 - from the hair. I've NEVER seen that one - I hope it means that they've found something new that we haven't seen before!

So glad they included "I Don't Want To Go On Without You" in the clips - given that she never recorded the song and the clip was only "found" in the weeks before she died, it's made a couple of appearances lately (including on the South Bank Show).

Anyone know where the "I Close My Eyes And Count To Ten" clip came from? I only hope they've "found" some of her 1969 BBC series.

I saw noticed the "I Close My Eyes And Count To Ten" clip to! I was squeezing my partner's arm whilst it was on going saying, "I've never seen that before, I'm sure I've never seen that before!"

I really like Joss Stone, but I agree that her dress was just a tad too short (even though it was hot 😊). What was with her going up to Trevor Nelson in the crowd though? And also her American 'twang' in her voice was annoying, but she is an excellent singer and a great choice to pay homage to la Dust.

I don't know where the clip was from either but I'll try my bestest to find out! Her hair looked the same as the photo I posted earlier on the See All Her Faces thread. Some tasteful editing, so we didn't get to see Patti in her meringue of a frock falling up the stairs. I thought Joss came across well in her speech, only failing a little at the end and great performers as Patti and Joss are, Dusty could do it so much better by holding back on the hysterics. And nice to see some of those I'd placed in my list of people who I wanted to receive Dusty's award, singing her praises on film. I'm thinking of Burt, Tom Jones and Martha but great to hear from Smokey Robinson, Cilla (makes a change from Lulu!) and Jerry Wexler, who as always knows the right things to say. Go Dusty 😊

I think Joss Stone was probably a good idea to sing "Son Of A Preacher" man - although her gyrations in that short dress were MILES away from the way Dusty would have performed it! I just think it's a little odd that they chose two singers who are a little over-the-top in their delivery to pay tribute to Dusty. Someone more subtle would have been better.

And, about the "American twang" thing - I think it's just that it happens on some words and not on others - and sounds a little odd - and a little forced/false at times.

Exactly....but she didn't TALK with so much of an accent until she went to the States. You HAVE to sing most pop songs with an American accent, otherwise it sounds odd! N'est pas??

Unless you're Alison Moyet - who seems to be singing everything in a very "Essex" accent these days!

I suppose it's natural - if she's working in the US - and working with soul musicians. It's just a little odd - hearing it all of a sudden - when she used to speak with a soft Devon accent.

Probably wrong, but looking in the Dusty 'bible', I see she sang ICMEACTT and Love Power on the Tom Jones Show in Aug '68, clip could have been from there maybe 🍋

I've moved the "proof" pics thread back up to the top on "See All Her Faces". That's the "do" she was wearing on the clip of "I Close My Eyes & Count To Ten".

i know, and i was cross! that was one of the highlights of the show! however, they didn't manage to edit out the "boo-ing" of Gordon Brown haha.

Some tasteful editing, so we didn't get to see Patti in her meringue of a frock falling up the stairs.

At least he didn't get a bucket of water thrown over him from the stage like John Prescott did at the Brits a few years ago!

the "friend" i was planning to take with me to the HoF has just told me that she can no longer make it - so i'm pretty annoyed, as you can imagine!

Well, i can tell you that i've forgiven her, that's for sure! I wouldn't have been there without her.

So thanks Sophie's friend, and i hope you and the scissorgirl stay cool.

maybe Fatima The Bold forgot to remove her Burka whilst watching the broadcast, so wasn't able to see any of it 🙄 either that, or she's not awake yet - she ain't called a night owl for nothin', ya know! 🙄

P.S. see what a bad influence that Joss Stone is - she's got me talkin' American, now 🙄

It took me like an hour to read through the thousands of pages i seemed to have slept through..

Does anyone know if the Hall Of Fame was shown on tellie in australia? Bloody Australians... we dont get anything.

Joss did a great job, for that particular kind of take on SOAP. Of all of the songs she could have done - that one best suited her .

The band, backing Patti, is a riot to see....
