Vote for Dusty (#p119207)

by Britpop » Wed Apr 24, 2013 8:43 pm

To all LTDs please visit a site called Dustyville where you are directed to a poll of the greatest female singers of all time. Dusty is positioned at number 97. Shock and horror when it is discovered all the so called 'singers' who are rated above her. Lets get Dusty to the top of this poll, where she undoubtedly belongs.

Thanks Connie for posting the link. I posted 100 posts before I finally got myself an avatar. I've not quite got the hang of Links etc., yet. I hope everyone votes ...early and often as they say. I couldn't believe some of the names above Dusty, mind boggling...Nicki Menaj..I could use a few expletives here, but I'll refrain from doing that.

Voted.

It's hard to take a poll seriously when someone like Nicki Menaj places so high... or even at all. It's kind of sad what current mainstream music people consider "good". Wish more young people listened to the greats... like Dusty.

This has been a problem, most probably from the late 80's when 'artists' became sales figures for the music business. True, the record companies wanted a return for their investments before this, but in those days things were slightly 'simpler' - it was exciting to see what singles artists would put out and more importantly THE songs. You only have to listen to the radio when 'oldies' are played - everybody remembers them - all the words, the tunes and what they were doing at the time, but from the 90's onwards real songwriters seem to disappear, and electronics took over in a big way. I'm not saying there havent been some wonderful songs since, but unlike in the 60's/70's where they came one after another, they only appeared occasionally.

This applies to the artists - and female artists in particular. There is a wealth of female 'singers' out there - some who have talent and deserve to succeed (Adele, Emeli Sande, Melody Gardot, Paloma Faith, Caro Emerald etc), but there are dozens who have very little to offer except a producer who's a wizzard with electronics and can mime and wriggle about on stage - 'dancing' *

* These 'singers' need to watch Tina Turner/Ikettes, Cher and most of the 60's girl groups to see how to dance AND sing at the same time!

Along with the lack of vocal ability, the 'songs' are nonedescript, repetitive and quite honestly - boring.

Videos play a big part in 'selling' the 'product' nowadays - hence you get the likes of Nicki Menaj, Cheryl (Cole), Katy Perry, Carly Rae Jepsen, Avril Lavigne, Demi Lovato etc - all interchangeable but not worth the bother!

All I can say is - most of us were born at the right time! - FOREVER DUSTY
