Little by little

It's funny where my mind wanders to when I've just finished work and am relaxing with a beer.

Was Dusty left- or right-handed? The reason I ask is that as a dancer I know that it's usually your non-writing hand that is the most expressive and 'connected' to you emotionally. I notice that Dusty held the mic in her left hand most of the time and gestured mostly with her right hand - this leads me to believe that she may have been left-handed.

I'm right-handed, and I know that all the emotion and expression is in my left hand/arm!

I realise this isn't quite up there with the stabilising of the global economy as a burning issue, but I'm sure you all understand my need to know, even though non-Dusty people would think I was completely bonkers 😊

Ooh, lovely pics, Cas - thank you! I love seeing natural, non-posed photos of her. My dancing theory has been proved wrong - Dusty is I think my first example of this!

Thank you for clearing this up for me. Most kind 😊 xx

Mary, I didn't think of looking at your video before posting - silly me! Anyway I should've remembered, given how many times I've watched it.

Thank you!

Maybe she liked holding the mic in her left hand so she could make those wonderful hand movements with her right hand.

Oh I love the way I can talk about the minutiae of Dustyisms like this, and nobody thinks it's a little too obsessive. 😊 Left hand, right hand, which one holds the mic, which one does all the gesturing...all very important stuff, of course 🙏

I ALSO LOVE IT WHEN DUSTY ASKED FOR A STANDUP MIC,
THEN SHE HAD BOTH HANDS FREE, 🇺🇸

Oh yes Mary - Dusty with both arms free and unrestrained is a quite glorious sight to behold!

she would have fun today with a "mike" fixed to her head like they do in the stage musicals. imagine all the hand movements then?

Hmm.. I wonder if she wouldn't have liked having a mic fixed to her head. I think she would have felt her hair would be compromised.

Just my two cents. :)
