Not so much as a sniff of a mention here, its outrageous, are all their journalists 14 years old?

Couldn't agree more! "Dusty" always synonymous with "beehive" - she took the style to new heights! Glad to see some comments in the same vein in response to the article. Hope those young things who write for the "Mail" [: take note!

In a perverse sort of way ,I am quite happy she wasnt in this daft article.

I dont need to see her with Lady GAA GGAAA etc.

I think she's such a unique artist that she stands alone in every aspect of her persona.
being alone she is also

" head and shoulders" above the rest. (pun intended)

I also admit I am in a perverse sort of mood at the moment

Some you win some you lose 😊 In other words, sometimes Dusty gets featured, sometimes she doesn't. We think of her as being THE beehive girl, but it was such a popular trend in the 60's, I guess she has to share the limelight sometimes. There are a couple of other beehive articles from the same paper where Dusty does get mentions.

🙄 Thanks for reviews that save me the time wasted reading weak material. I tend to side with Neil. Media (papers, radio, TV) are all hiring young people who work cheap, but have no concept of what went before them. All they know is NOW ! 🙄 well thats for sure Jeffery, when you think that the stupid idiot stepson of Dave Gilmour (pink floyd) is supposed to be studying history at Uni and yet in the so called student riots against tuition fee rise ,he climbed onto and was hanging off the flag draped on the Cenotaph in London, stating the next day that he didnt know what the Cenotaph was.it was disgusting and mindless disrespect but nothing gets done about that either. as you say, these will be the media people of the next few years probably, they are clueless. 🙄

Ok, I can just barely accept no Dusty. I mean, there were so many female singers with beehives in the sixties that it's possible to lose one. Wait. None of those other singers were mentioned either? The article makes a big deal about the beehive being popular in the sixties, but of all the people mentioned, only one is from the sixties? Well, that doesn't make any sense.

Still, if they had been writing a history of the beehive, the most glaring omission for me would have been the B-52s. Then Dusty as a close second.
