Dusty's was more bouffant, her bangs were more sideswept, and add in the black eyeliner, and you have an iconic look. Perhaps she did use some of the popular look of the day (no pun intended) but she sure Dustyified it to the point that it was unmistakably her own look that people copied.

Yes, it was the eyes that made that Look Dusty's own. The Bleached Blonde look was well established though. Dusty, being a quietly hip chick, referenced Catherine Deneuve and the French Look, but Doris is surely in there too. Dusty must have been influenced by all those movies she saw in the 50s so there are probably a few more references in there too.

Catherine Deneuve and the French look (I love Belle de Jour, crazy but lovely and uniquely French)! Of course. That hasn't struck me before. Memphis, you are SO interesting, please keep writing lots 🙏

Rosie you are SO interesting too and SO is Sara! 😊

Belle de Jour Oh Yes! (In any case Deneuve is divine). But I reckon Dusty was referencing Catherine in Les Parapluies de Cherbourg 1964 (The Umbrellas of Cherbourg) at least for one of her Looks. Check Catherine out around 2.12mins in..

Oh Memphis! I bloomin' LOVE Les Parapluies de Cherbourg! And of course that makes much more sense as Belle de Jour was '67.

I was just about to go and post something in the 'What Are You Listening To' thread about how I've been playing 'You Said Something' from P J Harvey's 'Stories From The City, Stories From The Sea' album a lot recently, and then I thought THIS IS GETTING RIDICULOUS!! 🙏🙏🙏

And Sara, really... 😊

Catherine Deveuve still looks amazing. In '8 Women' (2002 or thereabouts), you can see that the celebrated pout is still very much in evidence 😊

And hello Mary! 🇬🇧

Yes '8 Women' is a good fun movie! It ends with Catherine and Fanny Ardant rolling around the floor together as I remember. But this was another of my favourite clips as, very unfortunately, I can't find the rolling around the floor clip!:

I think Catherine Deneuve and Grace Kelly were (are) the two most beautifully serene movie stars ever. Though Doris was pretty, it was in a different, less classic way. I doubt that Dusty took any of her look from Doris, Dusty went bouffant very early on but then so did a lot of other ladies at the time. Dusty's look was an amalgam of so many other looks, she put it together and it became her look, her style and 40 odd years later, it's become iconic. There are some (and I don't necessarily disagree) who think that Dusty went for a Catherine look later in the 70's, for instance in those David Bailey shots.

Carole, is that a signed photo of Madame Deneuve?! Is it yours? Goodness me.

Memphis - I have persuaded many a male friend to watch '8 Women' with me by initiating the following discussion:

R: Do you fancy watching this film tonight? It's French.

Man: Has it got subtitles?

R: Yes, obviously.

Man: Erm, not really. Can we watch Bad Boys 2 instead?

R: Certainly not in my house. Oh, did I mention that the French film features two beautiful French actresses rolling around on the floor together?

Man: Actually, I'm a real French cinema buff, let's put it on.

And I love the clip you posted as well - wonderful! 😊

Oh, OK! That's a relief, I'm already envious enough of all your signed Dusty pictures. 😊
