I read in DWD that after treatment when Dusty's hair started to grow back in, it was silver and she had wanted to 'go out a blonde'. I'm wondering when she started going gray?

Hi Renge

Dusty dyed her hair for most her life, if not all of it - so probably only she or her hairdressers would be able to tell you that.

I think she left it grey for AVFL's promotion in 1995. According to DWD anyway.

Also, and I'm sorry about this Mads, but don't redheads tend to lose the colour in their hair quite early? Just something a redhead once said to me

I have a redhead friend who just turned 50 and she's not grey and doesn't color her hair. But perhaps she's an exception to the rule.

Redhead checking in. I'm 60 and only have a tad of pure white around the temples. Redheads usual skip the gray phase and go to pure white later in life.

Ro,

Lucky you. Gray runs early in my family ('and so does the bottle' as my grandmother used to say. She meant dye but I thought she meant hootch which is a whole other story :) My cousins were visibly gray in their teens. Thanks for the insight.

allherfaces-your friend,Ro and me can all thank our lucky stars (thats another thread)-we dont have to mess about colouring but I have started plucking out the white so I might be bald by the end of the year when I hit 50 😊. Does the hairdresser from Borehamwood, was it Debbie? keep in touch with Dusty fans?. She sounds like she must have been a true friend.

Yeah I've heard redheads go grey early, but Ro's right...we dont fade - we're too cool for that haha 🤪 We go straight from red to white - no pink!
