I've been running a bit behind this week and catching up with jobs listening to last Sunday's Elaine Paige Show on R2. After playing the new recording of ICMEACTT by Marc Almond and Sarah Cracknell (just ok but not a lot of point to it), she talked about the possibility of Dusty the Musical coming to the West End. She asked who listeners thought could possibly play the part of Dusty on stage and to email her with their choices. If she's in the know then this would suggest that Tamsin Carroll isn't likely to come with the show. I haven't a clue who I would suggest, perhaps they'll have to go with a reality TV show in the style of "How Do You Solve a Problem Like Maria"! A petite unknown with a voice to die for.....there must be one out there.

Should anyone want to mail Elaine, it's elaine@bbc.co.uk

2 words - Kate Winslet 🙄

Now that we've established that she's a good singer, you couldn't find a better young petite British actress for the role - she can play anything, IMHO.

Otherwise, Dame Margaret Rutherford - whoops.. she's dead. 🙄🙄

Love,
Ro 😊

Hey Kate Winslet is a really, really good idea!

Whats everyones opinion on dubbing in Dusty's voice vs. the chosen "Dusty" singing?

LOVE MADS.

There was an interview with Tamsin on Aussie TV recently, and of course they discussed the musical. She intimated that the show was intended for the West End and it was now purely a matter of logistics. As for whether or not she might star in the West End production, she said that if it did happen it would be icing on the cake.

Now I'm paraphrasing here, and I really don't like to quote/edit/misquote people - enough of that goes on without me adding to it. A transcript of the interview would be preferable. Perhaps when I have time, if anyone is interested.

Rigby.

How about Karen Noble?.....I know she dosen't sound exactly like Dusty but surely she's a worthy contender all the same.

Jessica Simpson also crossed my mind, she's proved she can act in Movies, but I'm unsure how well she'd fare on the Theatrical stage.

Clare,

Tamsin was interviewed for an episode of 'Maggie... At Home With' which has been screening on the bio channel. If you are interested, I should be able to make a copy. They do discuss the musical quite a bit, and include various stills. It isn't the kind of coverage found in 'Little By Little' (which I missed half of), but it is one on one, and it's in retrospect, with this interview taking place a while after the show had closed.

LOL!....yes, I guess you're right Nancy, I suppose that also rules out Mamie Van-Doren too!!.....(don't worry, I'm not gonna post Mamie's picture on this thread!😁)

I was trying to think of someone young, blonde, and bubbly which ruled out Britney and Christina A and left me with Jessica and Paris Hilton.....(and we won't go there, literally!😁😁)

Ah well, back to the drawing board!🙄

I watched that interview that you sent me Rigby. I just love Tamsin Carroll, she's so genuine. She didn't really say too much that we didn't already know. She said they want the show to go be on West End but it's just getting sponsors and money and stuff. Like Rigby said, getting the logistics of it all in place so who knows how long it will take!

Ro you may be right about Kate Winslett. Hugely talented.

Linda

But she's quick to point out that the constraints of musical theatre don't exactly suit her preferred style of performance. "It was great for me to do Dusty, but they had to hold me down," she says. "Now I'm unleashed."

Had anyone else considered a transfer of the supporting cast? I would not have thought it likely.

why not Sarah Cracknell herself? Granted she lacks Dusty's vocal abilities but she has a lot of Dusty's style and charm. I really enjoy listening to Saint Etienne's music and part of that charm is Sarah herself.

I have never understood why Tamsin Carroll isn't a shoe in for the part. She looks quite a bit like Dusty, has a great voice and has the experience of the Oz performances. What's the problem!

I don't pretend to know what's going on with the musical, it could be a financial hold up or lack of a theatre, or just a change of heart. Maybe it's still going ahead but in a very quiet way. From what I've seen of Tamsin in the Little by Little series, I thought she was great and she does have size and features similar to Dusty. As for her singing, you're never going to get a sound-a-like because Dusty was unique but I do wonder how the Oz speaking accent would go down in the UK. Maybe she could mimic a British/mid Atlantic voice, I don't know. Years ago I saw Wendy Stapleton do her tribute (on Bournemouth pier!) and the Oz accent was just so not Dusty!

Hey Carole. In the musical Tamsin did put on a British accent, it was similar to Dusty's actually, not quite the same obviously but still quite close 😊
