Ive never been a facts and figures fan, and this has been bugging me for yonks but ive never thought of asking anyone LOL. Why does this song appear so infrequently on dusty compilations? To me , its one of my most piognant and sad songs, the ones i play when i feel the need to cry. But its hardly ever included?

It's a really beautiful song that's featured on at least 6 Dusty albums 😊

I does occasionally make it but in general the compilers don't seem to have great imaginations. I also love it to bits, it was one of a few that I couldn't listen to for a long time after Dusty died and it still can bring a giant lump to my throat.

Yesterday when I was young
So many lovely songs were waiting to be sung
So many wild pleasures lay in store for me
And so much pain my eyes refused to see
I ran so fast that time and youth at last ran out
I never stopped to think what life was all about
And every conversation that I can now recall
Concerned itself with me and nothing else at all

It's one of my favorites too, but hard to listen to--a tear jerker. One of the first times I really listened to it, I felt as if she were revealing to me some essential truth of life....reckon she was!

'Tis one I still find hard to listen too...and you're right the compilers Carole, stick Wishin' and Hopin", IOWBWY and IJDKWTDWM on a CD and you have an album! It would be nice if this song was included some more...

I love this one too Neil, a very compelling, tear jerking, and beautiful song.

Completely agree with Cas. It's a wonderful song, and sung with so much passion.

This is a great song. I believe I only have it a very few times in my whole Dusty collection and one those instances is 'See All Her Faces' where the song comes from. I can actually remember this being played on the radio at the time of its release but can't pin point that (it was released twice). I remember doing a double take because of Dusty's voice and the dramatic quality of the song. It was a little milestone on my way to Dusty.

I could just listen to it as a typical Aznavour type song if it wasn't for Dusty's own line (I've never found evidence that it was anyone else's) about 'the destructive kind' at the beginning that makes this impossible. You just know this isn't just another perfect performance. There is real truth and real pain here. It's stunning.

Memphis hits it right on the head with the 'there's real pain here'. I have always loved this song and feel that Dusty was actually singing some truth (for her) and it pulls my heart to pieces. Hard to listen without a tear. 'So many, many songs were waiting to be sung'.

I wonder if the fact that it is so emotional is what keeps it where it is? slightly under the radar, because it evokes such strong emotion?

Could very well be, Neil. I think it's likely, too, that it's not included much as it was never a big hit for her. I must be one of the few it doesn't "hit" emotionally, but I do agree that it's gorgeous and such a great performance.
