Paul Howes informs me that he's had a mail about yet another Dusty DVD. I think it's from a company called Meridian (but I may have remembered that wrongly!) and part of the mail says....

We would like to bring to your attention that we are releasing a new Dusty Springfield DVD in June this year.

The DVD features fantastically re-mastered live television performances by Dusty and includes an exclusive Burt Bacharach interview among lots of other essential footage and bonus features for Dusty Springfield fans. The release is the first of a series celebrating the 45th anniversary of the British invasion.

Sounds interesting, Carole :)

We seem to be doing increasingly well for Dusty media these days :)

Thank you, Carole

This sounds like the one for me but I'll wait to see what is on it. Another dream of mine is that some of those rare YouTube videos will be officially released. The source tapes are out there somewhere for sure. Maybe this DVD will include some of them. The Dusty year is picking up speed nicely. 😊

Great news. Thanks, Carole. Not that long to wait, either... 😊

So this is not the same German Dusty special from 67 or 68 that Paul was trying to get released through his Zone label, right? Is there any news on that one? The final DSB (sob! sob!) said it had been postponed but was expected soon.

good news and I hope the Bacharach one will be the classic "a house is not a home" will be worth it just for that.
