We all know things and do things because we are avid Dusty fans, so let's list some!

It's simple, just start the sentence with 'You know you're a Dusty fan when' I'm sure we'll be able to relate to more than a few! 😊

For example:

You know you're a Dusty fan when you can tell the date of a photograph or video clip based on her hair. 😊

Every time I want to post on here someone has come up with the same thought. Yes Dusty is wallpaper on desktop, phone -I must listen to her a least once a day and always if poss before I go to bed. I visit LTD at least early doors and evening if poss. I watch YT clips and my Dusty DVDs frequently. I only have a cassette in my car but have managed to make some tapes up of Memphis ,White Heat, Dust Def and Just Dust.

I will remain a returning fan as Dusty has been my saving grace in the last 18 months or so and I cannot think where I would have been without her and the great friends she has introduced me to through this forum. Love you Dusty and thanks. Teddy and Babs send you lots of love too.

No need to apologise Pat, that's lovely. 😊

A few months ago I had a chat with my nan about Dusty and it meant so much to me because I don't have much in common interest wise with my parents and I'm an only child, so it's so nice to know we share Dust. Now that conversation means more to me because out of the blue she's been diagnosed with cancer and she won't live much longer. It's caused by asbestos and could have been lying dormant since she was a teenager. I wish so much that I could get to know her as an adult. It's her birthday on Sunday and I'm chief photographer. We've put together a bucket list for her which is nice.

The part I get upset about is seeing my mum and my grandad upset. I'm very optimistic, but I know this will crush him. I love them so much, they are the sweetest, most intelligent people I know.

I don't know why I said all that, sorry for bringing the mood down. I haven't had a chat about it, guess I needed to write it down. I initially joined LTD to take my mind off of it, and everyone has been so welcoming, so thank you so very much.

Thanks Dusty for being there.

Don't ever be sorry Pat, just think how happy Dusty would be to know how much she means to you! I haven't met any members of LTD in person but I feel at "home" here too. I have had a lot of family crap going on since my mother died in 2005 and it never ends. I escape to Dusty Land all the time too and it helps.

I'm not sure why but it does 😊 Even after all this time Dusty is still bringing joy to her fans...what a legacy of love as well as music she left ❤️

Thanks Darren, and Evelyn (my mum's name you don't hear it much these days). Zoey you are so right it is very good to commit your thought to writing. Believe it or not I rarely if ever wrote any of my inner thoughts down. I was never a diarist. Since joining LTD I have written lots of things and received such positive responses which I never expected, I really appreciated it.

I am willing to bet there is not another fanzone on the web that shows so much care for each other. But then that's what Dusty does she loves her fans .

My best wishes to your Nan for her birthday. 🌹🌹

by Zoey » Sat Aug 03, 2013 8:28 pm

Thanks everyone, to tell the truth I didn't expect any warm wishes! 😊 I don't write down my feelings either Pat, or even really express them in words because I feel like a drama queen and feel the need to be happy around other people. I do have a habit of crying for other people though, which can be embarrassing. 😞

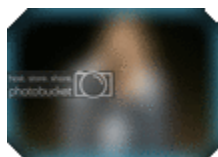

I've not yet been here a month, but it does feel like a little family set up on here and I have a LTD tab on my phone now so I can check it when I'm out and about (and bored at work, but don't tell my boss! 😊). 😊

I'm sorry to hear about your MS Lynn, it's a truly terrible disease. I imagine Dusty would be really proud that her music still helps others through tough times.

Anyway, I'll try to get the thread back on track a little bit!

You know you're a Dusty fan when you get excited over her face on a card in Clintons and WHSmiths...

Warmest wishes to you and your family Zoe. I hope the party goes well tomorrow 😊🥳

Sorry to hear about your MS Lynn. It must be so difficult at times. At least you can find solace in Dusty 🌟

Check...check...check...check. check. check. check.... the list goes on. Can't think of any new ones at the moment.

Zoey, I'm sorry to hear about your nan. I don't think I've formally welcomed you to LTD either, but I'm so glad you joined! I just joined mid-January, and yeah, in less than a month, I was obsessed. My fandom had been growing all last year, but after joining LTD, I think it quadrupled. That's when I started learning SO much more about her. There's nothing this bunch doesn't know or won't try to find out. By now, some of my friends & fam are sick of every conversation turning to Dusty, but after all, "There's something in my soul that will always lead me back to you." Haha. Dust seems to have that effect on people. I was going through some hard times myself, so the distraction of colorizing her photos at all hours was my therapy when I was new. That's one reason I appreciate your GIFs so much! 🤔 They're amazing and that creative energy, intense fandom and this supportive community can be so healing. This is an awesome thread too. Welcome!

Aww bless you Kristin, that's really sweet. 🥰❤️

So it was you who colourized some photos! I've seen them and I absolutely LOVE what you've done. 🤔🙌🙌🙌 I only talk to my friend George about Dusty (and other people I really love) because he understands how important she is to me. We're old fashioned in the way that he comes over mine with a bottle of something and we talk about albums. As much as I would love to talk about Dusty to others, I'm aware that people might say stupid stuff.

This seems to be the diary thread now! 🤔🤔

You know you're a Dusty fan when you judge every HMV on their amount and variation of Dusty music.

I'll admit I have trouble sticking to thread topics too. 😊 so...

You know you're a Dusty fan when...

you take it personally and become defensive if people don't know who Dusty is you'll spend the rest of your meeting sharin' the gospel (aka EDUCATING them)

you can identify the differences between her pre- and post- California accents 🤖 / 😊

Since I don't drive, I guess I can only wish that subway trains said Dusty Island/Soulville on the side. Now I'm gonna think about that every time I ride the D train. 😊

You know you're a Dusty fan when... you map out and try to visit locations where her picture was taken.

I like your last sentence there Kristin! I've done it for years and maybe it's a good idea for a thread 🏠

You rarely watch TV in the evenings preferring to play Dusty's music and DVDs over and over again.

😊 You know you're a Dusty fan when your post to the thread topic seems like an echo of every comment just made by your fellow LTD members. 🤖

🎵 😊 🎵 And you only want to listen to the best damn vocals you've ever heard ! 😊🎵

😬 Can I sing that ?

🎵 😊 🎵 I only want to listen to you. 🎵 ⭐ 🎵

When you get a short riff or a snippet of a lyric stuck in your head, A) It's always Dusty and B) you can identify the song in under a minute.

Zoey, I specifically remember being frustrated with typing 'Springfield' into search bars... before muscle memory (and bookmarks and YouTube playlists) took over. Now it's about as fast as my own name. Can't say the same about MICBO

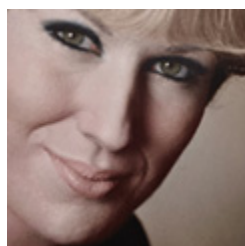

Oh and you know you're addicted to facebook when... you instinctively look for the Like button beneath these posts. I Like everything on here is what I'm trying to say.

You know you're a Dusty fan-and a Dusty nut-when you measure how long it takes to complete a journey listening and singing along to a certain song.This morning it took four and a half plays of some of your loving. 🤔🤔 In the words of a song-I think I must be losing my mind! 🤔🤔

You're not losing your mind, Lynn! 😊 I could listen to that song on repeat for days and never get sick of it. 🍷

When you have to sing the the lyrics...and the backing vocals...and the instrumentals...to every Dusty song.

There's a place called Springfield on the way to my nan and grandad's and I graffiti 'Dusty' on the signs in my head when I drive past. 😎 (there's also 'White Hart Lane' which I read as 'White Heat Lane' 😊)

Lynn, I do that too when commuting! 😊 A few years ago I took a course at uni, and the journey took they entire A Very Fine Love, which I very much enjoyed! 🍷 And such a good excuse to listen to it over and over again. ⭐

Kristin, some time ago I was actually looking at the possibility of incorporating "Like"-buttons here on the forum! There is an extension for it, but I'd have to alter the core files, and I'm not entirely comfortable with that. 😊 So until some easier solution shows up, thumbs up smilies will have to do! 🍷👍

*Zoey wrote:*No need to apologise Pat, that's lovely. 😊

A few months ago I had a chat with my nan about Dusty and it meant so much to me because I don't have much in common interest wise with my parents and I'm an only child, so it's so nice to know we share Dust. Now that conversation means more to me because out of the blue she's been diagnosed with cancer and she won't live much longer. It's caused by asbestos and could have been lying dormant since she was a teenager. I wish so much that I could get to know her as an adult. It's her birthday on Sunday and I'm chief photographer. We've put together a bucket list for her which is nice.

The part I get upset about is seeing my mum and my grandad upset. I'm very optimistic, but I know this will crush him. I love them so much, they are the sweetest, most intelligent people I know.

I don't know why I said all that, sorry for bringing the mood down. I haven't had a chat about it, guess I needed to write it down. I initially joined LTD to take my mind off of it, and everyone has been so welcoming, so thank you so very much.

Thanks Dusty for being there.

Not a problem Zoey. The cancer that both my dad and my brother died from is caused by Asbestos. I'm well schooled.

Anytime you feel the need to talk PM me.

Now, I know I'm a Dusty Fan because:

A. My dog knows her. I tell him c'mon lets go watch Auntie Dusty on TV.

B. her music is all I listen to lately.

C. I go to sleep with one of her DVDs on the TV.

D. My dream is to record some of her songs. (Yes I sing)

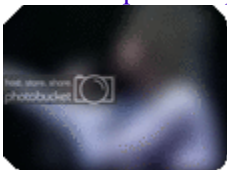

I'm a sick one, I know!

...Everytime you hear a line of ordinary dialogue, you immediately spot a Dusty connection. :I was on a train when it suddenly stopped, and a young girl said

"we're in the middle of nowhere" I wanted to break into song.
