😊 Well thank God you weren't too rude Brian! Actually while I don't know Cheryl just looking at her online images now I think she's far from ugly but definitely plus size & thus a rather left-field choice for a show whose participants impersonate diverse singers. Hopefully the North American version Sing Your Face Off will be starting up soon as I'm really hard up for any telly viewing these days - I don't glue myself in front of the tube all day but it would be nice to have an hour or two of worthwhile viewing in the evenings, & it seems lately I'm lucky if I'm afforded half an hour of what might be termed "viewing pleasure".

😲 Is this some kinda comedy show?

There is no way in the world that Cheryl Ferguson could 'be' Dusty unless its a mickey take. 😞

Don't like the sound of this. 😞

Not being an Eastender watcher, I had to Google her to see who she was and it seems she's a Ferguson, not a Ferguson 🍋 I saw that she said when she put on the wig and make up, she felt happy because she looked like her mother! At least she didn't say she looked just like Dusty 😊 I presume they have to use their own voice or it would be an even dafter show!

There's a part of you, that's a part of me...

🤔 Well I'm expecting to hear a multi-voiced sigh of delighted relief when you nay-sayers view this pic of Cheryl Ferguson made-up for Your Face Sounds Familiar:

CherylF.jpg (39.69 KiB) Viewed 3505 times

Seriously I don't think Cheryl herself is ugly but that's not a good look for her. The other participants on the show seem to have been assigned evocations that don't make them look bad: if the producers thought Cheryl as Dusty would make a favorable opening impression I can't begin to think who they might have in mind for her down the line! To put things in proper perspective Cheryl is participating in the series in hopes of raising money for chYps hospice care, a charitable donation being awarded to each episode's highest vote getter.

Not a total train wreck. 🤔 The programme as a whole was about as good as we get on a Saturday night these days(Not a compliment). At least they shortened the songs. 🍏 Cheryl was okay. 🤔 Hopefully this will send the real You Don't Have To Say You Love Me back into the Charts. 🎵

Just watched the show...and she won!

I would hope the reason for this was because people still love Dusty and YDHTSYLM, for both vocally and visually she was about as far away from Dusty you could get.

The only act to come close to the person she was impersonating was the athlete girl -Denise Lewis who did are very good Tina Turner and obviously had studied Tina's movements.

Won't be watching it again.

Well,I was quite relieved, to be honest. 😊

I thought it would be some horrible comedy routine, but to be fair, Cheryl gave it her best shot. 😬

She didn't look like Dusty(obviously!) and didn't sound like Dusty (obviously !)and yet that song(YDHTSYLM) still sounded good and stole everyone's hearts. ❤️

The audience reaction was fantastic and I think that is because everyone still loves Dusty.. ⭐

She was described as a 'legend' more than once, and with that we all wholeheartedly agree 😊

So not as bad as expected, and in alot of ways was pretty good. 🙄

Carole R.. Glad to have been wrong on this occasion. 😬 😊

Well I'd take that "Randomiser" jazz with a grain of salt: I understand next week there'll be gender mismatches with Taylor Swift & Lenny Kravitz : still there's no ethnic mismatch & overall the "Randomiser" has shown considerable logic in who plays who. I don't think Cheryl looks her best "glammed up" but for a show like this Cheryl & Dusty are not that way out a match - is it truly feasible that Cheryl and Denise Lewis (Tina Turner) might have ended up with the other's role?

There doesn't seem to be much media reaction to the show - Metro has run a "story" with the headline Your Face Sounds Familiar wins 'worst show ever' accolades from Twitter users but I imagine using social media as a source could "substantiate" that claim for every show ever aired. Hopefully by Tuesday - with the Canuck long weekend that's the soonest I can get back online - I'll be able to watch at least some clips at Youtube. Reading the Digital Spy forum it sounds like the show is interesting at least from certain perspectives - did Emma Bunton really say "Dusty Springboard" at one point?

Oh yes - congrats to Cheryl for winning for her charity.

Well I found a selective Youtube vid of the show. The clip only features Cheryl's performance so I can't comparatively assess her but her performance by itself seems worthy of first place: she has a strong enough voice to make her being visually unlike most singing stars not that important in how she'll fare in this sort of showcase. Congrats again. BTW - it does seem that Emma says "I love Dusty Springboard!"

Oh - here's the clip:

When I heard which song Cheryl would be singing I thought, there's no way she's going to reach the high notes! However they toned it down and she did pretty well, and I actually voted for her. So pleased she won. It was great that all artists had a nice word to say about our Dusty.

☺ Well - I guess it's a bit daft to fret when Cheryl won but I still think given her robust presence shoe-horning her into a delicate persona'd singer like Dusty (at least in YDHTSYLM mode) ran the risk of making her look foolish & even if Cheryl rose above that I hope in future the Randomiser arbitrarily - ahem - assigns her singers with tougher personalities. Anastacia next week is I think a good choice: I'd also suggest Ann Wilson of Heart & Bonnie Tyler. Not sure if the show's steering away from any acknowledgment of Cheryl's size but I'd like to see her as Mama Cass. Actually I probably won't get to see her as anyone - the vid I embedded in my last post has been removed from Youtube & no one else seems bothered enough to post anything there. Your Face Sounds Familiar (UK) seems to be a total non-event - the posters on this thread seem to be the only people who give a toss about it!

Unfortunately 'Your Face Sounds Familiar' is consistent with the usual Saturday night dross. 🗨️

...the only reason (I'm guessing) most of us gave it houseroom was out of sheer curiosity. 😏

Now, I've seen 'Dusty' I won't be watching it again, and I doubt many others will be bothering either. 🗨️ 😞

Everyone seems to think that Dusty is forgotten, but she's not is she, and you can always tell by the reaction of the audience how much she is still revered.

I remember when the One and Only was on, and that night I had to go to a tiny village called Pill to a friends 60's birthday where she had hired the local village hall. I went into the toilet with my little portable television to try and get the result of the final, and there were all these women in there, trying to find out the result as well, and they asked who I was backing to win, and amazingly they were all hoping for a Dusty Springfield win as well. Now this was in a tiny remote village in Somerset, so Dusty is not underrated and not forgotten and she is always getting her dues one way or another. The interesting thing was as well, that these women were not my age, but young kids. Good music and good artists are always appreciated wherever you are.

Dusty rules supreme in the UK, almost everyone remembers her. The Spice Girls might be a distant memory, but Dusty isn't.

Oh Wendy, how I remember that night! After the show was over, the crew who were looking after us admitted that "Dusty" won every week and they never doubted she would win the final too. Katy was good, she needed to be, but I'm still convinced it was really Dusty who won 😊

I agree, when singers win "as Dusty", it the love people still have for Dusty herself that leads the public to vote .

She will never be forgotten , the number of times her music is played on the radio stations is also testament to that.

I watched the show, but only because i heard that someone was going to do Dusty.

I thought Cheryl made a pretty good job of it, YDHTSYLM must be one of the hardest songs of all her hits to sing, Dusty made it look easy.

On the whole is just seemed like one big karaoke night for charity, it was brilliant that Cheryl won the 10k. I found the show fairly humorous, Bobby Davro as Tom Jones was hilarious and excruciating in equal measures, i might watch it again - but only to see if Matt gets to do Elvis.
