..With the benefit of hindsight, etc. 😊

You have a hotline to Heaven. 😊

What would be the first THREE questions you would ask her?..

This is STRICTLY three questions only. 🍎

I had the day off today. I thought about Carole's question for a long time. I couldn't think of three questions that I could dare to ask. Truthfully. But right now off the top of my head, I guess I might get around to asking how she prepared for a favourite track or two.

Um.. then maybe something standard like 'When were you most happy?'

Um maybe something about the track 'Beautiful Soul'. Why she chose that song when it must have been quite an obscure and brave choice at the time?

If I was brave I'd ask her who the loves of her life were and I'd ask her about her life around the Atlantic Records years and ask her about her child-hood years too. She'd probably tell me her greatest loves were her cats and then tell me my time was up! These last are the kind of questions I'd really like to ask her but I just wouldn't be able to because they would be too intrusive. Unless she took a shine to me and told me 'let's park this for now, but when you get here call me and let's get together and here's my number...'

What's it like up there?
Do you get to sing?
Is God in the audience?

Hi Tim

I was thinking about those kind of questions too. Like forget Dusty, I'd just ask her to give my love to the people I know are up there! And 'What's it like, is it really worth the trip!?'

Something to give us all a little spiritual conviction would be very comforting.

I can also imagine her rolling her eyes and saying - I thought I'd be SAFE from any more goddam interviews up here..

Oh, I think God would have a front row seat. How could He not, with Miss Dusty singing??

I cant choose 3 its too hard. I would just like to think she is there and that we may all get to see her in concert there one day, now that would be some Dusty Day.

Would you like to have had a sister?

Was there any professional opportunity you passed on that in hindsight you wish you had taken?

Who in your life made you laugh the most?

Posted - 29/09/2009 : 17:42:26

I had to give this some thought, but I came up with five questions, this morning. Not sure if I would actually have the nerve to ask her these questions, but....

1. If you could do it all over again, what would you do differently?
2. How upset are you with the book Dancing with Demons and all that Vicki has said?
3. Are there any songs you wish you recorded and never got to?
4. Do you remember meeting me in New York City and who were the other three ladies you were with?
5. Do you recall who the couple was recording the tape at the Grande Finale? Were they personal friends? I would tell her that you can actually hear me on that tape, in the very beginning, if you listen very closely you can hear me saying I doubt it. In response to a question about getting a copy of the tape. I would tell her the story how I got a copy of it on a CD many years later from a Dusty friend in Wales that I met on the old Dustymail site.

I would also tell her that I was already a huge fan at 12 years old when I met her at Sterns and how important she has been to me throughout my life. How much I enjoyed her at the Brooklyn Fox and especially the Persian Room at the Plaza Hotel. I would also tell her performance that night at the Persian Room was sheer magic beyond words! Wish she was in better health at the Grande Finale. I would also show her the picture I took her there. Lastly, I would tell her how much I miss her.

Um...not too sure there is a heaven, but I'd ask...

1. Are my cats alright, and please will ya look after them until I get there and will ya please come and get me?
2. What was it like meeting Karen Carpenter and what did/do you think of her and the music, and is she happy? 😊
3. Are you happy and do you know now how great you are and how many lives you affected and people you made happy?

Is having lotsa questions in one question cheating? 🤔

Sara - There definitely is a heaven. But all I know about the place is that there are no hot meals, just sandwiches. I know this is true because my grandmother asked Saint Peter, and he told her, "There are only nine people up here - You think I'm going to hire a cook!"

I'd gladly forgo two of the questions for a positive response to "Will you please sing me a song?" Any song. I'm not fussy. I might even wait until February and request Happy Birthday (imagine that).

Besides, I'd be too busy picking myself up off the floor to ask any more (and in reality, I would never dare to ask).

I have only two:

What are your thoughts about growing up Catholic?

How do you like the way my uncles threw Buddy Rich out of their restaurant?

I think I would like to ask Dusty who she would choose to take the lead role in a movie of her life?
Which of her albums brought her the most satisfaction?
Who would she like to have shared the stage with but never managed to do so?

I would ask:

All modesty aside, do you think you were an underated singer/performer?

Do you make visitations to your fans or at Dusty Days?

Are there food fights in Heaven?
